Roosevelt Prepares Ultimatum To Lewis

Action Reported After U.M.W. Fails To Observe WLB Stop Strike Order

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

A presidential order to John L. Lewis to end the 12-day-old strike of members of the United Mine Workers at the Newark, N. J., plant of the Celanese Corporation, was reported in preparation last night as the War Labor Board requested the President to intervene after a union representative replied to a board ultimatum to end the strike by accusing the WLB of making "unwarranted threats."

An order from President Roosevelt directing either the Army or Navy to occupy the plant to break the strike was regarded as a probable development if the strike continued. It was considered likely that the President might give the strikers at least another day to make up their minds before calling troops.

Possibly Face Defiance

The Celanese case went to the White House as the board moved to face defiance possibly from Lewis on another front—revolving around the action of Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins certifying the soft coal wage dispute to WLB.

Faced with the threat of a possible Nation-wide coal strike, the board prepared for a 10 a. m. meeting today on the coal case to which Lewis and representatives of the coal operators were summoned. Whether Lewis would appear or start the wheels in motion for a coal strike today was a matter of speculation among Government officials yesterday, but the Republic Steel Corporation reported in Cleveland, according to the Associated Press, that strikes were in progress at four of its "captive mines," with nearly 1900 miners idle.

A union official blamed the walkouts on "tremendous unrest of the workers" and predicted a general

Rubber Situation Has Hit Bottom, Woman Complains

Civilian women, its seems, are not the only ones affected by the shortage of rubber elastic for panties and such. The situation described in a letter from a Florida woman to rubber director, William M. Jeffers, appealing for "synthetic, recaps or scrap" rubber for that "most vital part of a woman's attire," reaches even unto WAACS and WAVES, generally thought free from such wartime restrictions, according to the public relations offices of the Army and Navy.

WAVES get no special priorities where their underthings are concerned. Obliged to buy their clothing at regular shops, they take their chances with civilian buyers on finding underwear that will stay up.

Now, even WAACS are feeling the pinch. Formerly issued a full complement of clothing, WAACS are now obliged to buy their own brassieres and girdles because there just isn't enough rubber available for G. I. underwear. Panties are still being issued by the Army, but the rubber in all of them put together wouldn't make a full-sized tire, as someone put it.

Plane Fund Soars Past $100,000 Peak

New Record Sum Expected Today, Last Day of Drive

(Names of donors on Page B-7)

The $100,000 peak was passed in contributions received yesterday in the Government Girl warplane contest.

Exactly $12,560 was received for the day, boosting the total to $102,152.

Contributions from all sources today—the final day of the campaign undoubtedly will set an all time record for the drive, Donald S. Dawson, chairman of the special Council of Personnel Administration, predicted.

It was announced late yesterday that the Treasury would accept late contributions for the Government Girl warplanes all the coming week, Dawson announced.

Expect High Mark

A special request was made yesterday by L. L. Collie, room 370 Treasury Department Building, to all Government Girl workers to make every effort today to turn in contributions early.

Collie, Miss Mildred Steadman and other Treasury employes expect a record high mark on the last day of the drive.

One hundred per cent average in the campaign didn't stop Federal employes in the audit section of the CAA when they got "really mad."

Now they're 200 per cent and it came about with the announcement of the Jap executions of American Tokyo fliers.

"Everybody was mad at once," explained Dorothy D. Ford, who said she didn't have to do any soliciting. "They just came over to my desk and put down another dollar all around and didn't say much."

Workers Honored

Last night Miss Ford said the "retread" job on the audit section's campaign was actually more than another 100 per cent because they have $35 more and there are only 30 employes in the section.

Government Girl campaigners in two Federal agencies have been feted for their unusual activities in the drive.

Another Record Day Indicated In Bond Sales

Another record-shattering day in bond purchases was indicated late yesterday, when Wilmer J. Waller, chairman of the Banking Division of the Second War Loan Drive, said: "It is another big day and some of the reports are higher than Wednesday's."

From the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond came figures verifying the opinion expressed by Waller and other Washington bankers that Thursday was the greatest bond-buying day in the history of the Nation's Capital.

80% of Quota Raised

Total sales jumped $5,167,740 to an aggregate of $33,109,303.25, which is 80 per cent of the District of Columbia's quota of 42 million dollars for investors other than commercial banks and dealers.

The previous day's total was $27,931,000 for the District.

"Workers in the loan drive are very much encouraged," Waller, who is vice president of the Hamilton National Bank here, said.

"While forging ahead," he said, "we are trying not to be too optimistic, but there is no doubt that the picture is encouraging. And also there is ample evidence that individual subscriptions to the Second War Loan securities are increasing in number.

To Help Doolittle

"Expressions were plentiful," Waller said, "that individuals were buying extra bonds to speed the production of planes to help Jimmy Doolittle keep his vow to blast Tokyo again in vengeance for the execution of his buddies."

"Most of our subscriptions have been in $18.75, $37.50 and $75 denominations," said Oliver Walker who heads the Real Estate and Mortgage Division of the District War Finance Committee.

"We have a working group of 25 selected workers, all of whom are identified with the District of Columbia Real Estate Board. Each has from 15 to 30 prospect cards all being contacted personally."

In the meantime, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau left Washington yesterday by plane on the first leg of his West Coast trip to bolster war bond sales there as reports reached the Treasury from all sections of the country of sharp

Ways-Means To Vote Today On Tax Plan

Doughton Claims Strength Enough To Win Approval

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

A final Ways and Means battle is scheduled today over sending to the House floor a tax bill to place millions of taxpayers on a full pay-as-you-go system by the end of 1945, and to bring the Federal Government an estimated three billion dollars or more in extra revenue out of this year's individual incomes.

Chairman Doughton (Democrat) of North Carolina last night claimed the votes to obtain committee approval for the bill, although Republicans indicated the outcome was far from certain. A test was postponed until today after members heard the bill read in a closed session. Republicans after hearing the discussion questioned whether Doughton's bill would find the votes to clear the committee. Doughton said the delay was provided to give the members more time to study the measure, and declared "we have enough votes to report it."

General Debate May 3

Doughton's bill was chosen by House Democratic leaders as their weapon for beating down a second time Republican-sponsored legislation to write into law the Beardsley Ruml skip-a-year plan, or a 75 per cent part of it. A tentative agreement reached yesterday calls for devoting all of Monday, May 3, to general debate on the various tax plans, and the next one or more days to settling choice of a bill by votes.

Representative Knutson of Minnesota, Republican tax leader, said he expected to wait until the debate to present legislation embodying the 75 per cent Ruml compromise. Representative Carl-

Might Alienate Allies

George Warns Against Placing Any Strings on Trade Pacts

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

A blunt warning that limitations on the reciprocal trade act will risk postwar alienation of United Nations allies and adversely affect the course of the war was issued yesterday in the Administration's fight to keep trade extension law free of any form of congressional veto.

Senator Walter F. George (Democrat) of Georgia, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, cautioned against restrictive amendments that might persuade Britain and Russia that "Congress was going down the same road it followed after World War I."

George spoke to reporters as the House Ways and Means Committee concluded hearings on the Administration bill extending the trade act for three years. Chairman Robert L. Doughton of the Ways and Means Committee told newsmen he agreed with George.

Doughton's committee will meet Monday to begin executive consideration of the bill and the committee's report may be filed with the House before the end of the congressional recess. The committee vote is expected to be close, but majority leaders expressed confidence they could ward off amendments that would hamstring the act.

By restrictive changes, Senator George said he did not necessarily mean amendments limiting the act to two years instead of three, or providing for hearings before promulgation of treaties, though he regarded both as unnecessary. What he and Doughton will chiefly oppose are any stipulations for congressional ratification or disapproval of the treaties.

"I do not think at this time the Government can afford to acquiesce in any amendments that would give Congress the right to disapprove these agreements," said the finance committee chairman. "Other nations are watching us. In point of time this will be the first thing that indicates the attitude of our

He Has 26 Jap 'Scalps'

Foss, Marine Air Ace, Wants To Pay Tokyo 'Personal Visit'

(Picture on Page 2.)

By Donald Kovasic
Associated Press Staff Writer

America's ace pilot in this war—Marine Capt. Joe Foss, who shot down 26 Japanese planes in the battle of Guadalcanal—wants to go back to the Pacific "to pay a short visit to Tokyo."

"Then," said the one-time South Dakota farm lad who used to whet his marksmanship by shooting skunks, "maybe we could have a short talk about what happened" to the Doolittle pilots who fell into Japanese hands after the raid on Tokyo more than a year ago.

Foss met reporters yesterday at a press conference and made no effort to hide his feelings over the execution of some of those fliers.

But the strapping pilot, whose record of enemy planes downed exactly equals that of Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker in the first World War, won't have his wish fulfilled at once. He is to make a tour of pre-flight schools and naval training stations around the country after a short leave at home.

Drawing a contrast to the fate of the Doolittle fliers, Foss said considerate treatment was shown Japanese prisoners, including pilots, in the Solomons.

Of his own exploits, which consisted in the 10 weeks he spent on Guadalcanal of downing 20 Zeros, 4 bombers and 2 reconnaisance planes and then surviving a crash into the sea, Foss said his biggest day was last October 25. He bagged two enemy craft in the morning and three in the afternoon, one of them directly over Henderson Field.

Describing American aerial tactics as "like a football team," Foss said the very essence of successful combat is teamwork.

"In my estimation a pilot who hasn't shot down a plane but goes up there and protects his leader rates higher than a pilot with a big score," he added to offset any impression that fliers are in a race to see who can ring up the biggest score of kills.

He said the Japanese fliers are excellent but have a flair for showmanship—they love nothing better than to put on a show. A series of rolls and loops in approaching or leaving a dogfight apparently pleases them very much.

As contrasted to American pilots? "Use your own judgment and compare the score," he grinned. The Solomons score is five planes to one, in favor of the Americans.

Heavy Hitting

By the Associated Press

London, April 23.—A striking force of 200 Russian long-range bombers battered the east Prussian railway center of Insterburg, on the German trunk supply line to the north Russian front, for more than two hours last night and left the entire city in flames, a special Soviet communique said tonight.

It was added that a single bomber was lost in the sixth raid of the big Russian aerial offensive from the east which started April 10 with an attack on Koenigsberg. It was the first time the Russians had concentrated on Insterburg. Previous targets were Danzig and Tilsit.

Two hundred planes is the largest number the Russians ever had mentioned using in the new wave of raids with the R. A. F. and United States aerial onslaught to keep Hitler's citadels under fire from both sides.

Two-Hour Raid

The raid was announced in the following special communique:

"During the night of April 22-23 a force of 200 Soviet planes bombed Insterburg in east Prussia. The raid lasted more than two hours.

"Many conflagrations of military and industrial targets in the city resulted from bombing and at the end of the raid the entire city was enveloped in flames. The fires were accompanied by numerous powerful explosions.

"All our planes but one returned to their bases."

R. A. F. Raid Indicated

New York, April 23 (AP).—The Federal Communications Commission reported tonight that Deutschlandsender, radio station located in the Berlin area, went off the air tonight—the usual indication of R. A. F. activity over the continent. The radio resumed after 40 minutes.

Raider Bombs British Town

London, April 23 (INS).—A Nazi raider bombed a large town in the west Midlands area of England tonight as air raid sirens screamed London's 627th alert of the war.

The Midlands includes such large industrial cities as Liverpool, Birmingham and Coventry.

Gunfire was heard in London for a short time after the alert first sounded. The all-clear came soon after and it was believed the capital's antiaircraft defenses had driven off a lone enemy plane.

U.S. Forces Set Up Advance Base On Tiny Isle of Ellice Group

Post Staff Writer

The Navy disclosed yesterday that American forces have established an advance base in the South Pacific within a few hundred miles of Japanese fortified islands of the Gilbert group.

Occupation of the outpost on Funafuti, one of the Ellice Islands, was accomplished "some time ago" without opposition from the enemy, it was stated.

The tiny Pacific isle—6.8 miles long and from 50 to 700 yards wide—lies close to the international date-line and just south of the equator. It lies about half-way between Jap bases in the Gilbert Islands and American bases in the Fiji and Samoa some 1000 miles southeast.

Chief value of Funafuti, naval officers said, is as an outpost for reconnaissance forces. From there, it is possible for our scouting units to keep an eye over hundreds of miles of water and particularly the enemy's bases in the Gilbert Islands.

Along with Johnston, Howland, Baker, Guadalcanal and New Guinea Islands, Funafuti forms a chain of advance bases flanking and protecting the main line of American communications to Australia. The principal base stepping-stones run from Hawaii through Samoa and the Fijis.

First information of the new base was given in a Navy communique yesterday reporting a Japanese air attack on the island.

"During the early morning (Thursday), a group of enemy bombers raided Funafuti, U. S. occupied position in the Ellice Island group," said the Navy.

"Light casualties to personnel were suffered and minor damage was inflicted."

A Navy spokesman declared that the island had been occupied without opposition, but would not say when American forces had moved into this area of the Pacific.

Later Secretary Knox said the occupation had taken place "some time ago." He would not say whether our forces were on any other of the Ellice Islands or what installations we had there.

Last October 24, however, the Navy announced that U. S. Naval forces "have recently carried out operations in the Gilbert and Ellice Island" and had sunk or damaged some enemy ships in the Gilberts. This may have been the occupation of Funafuti.

It is presumed that Funafuti—the largest of the Ellice chain—is

British Wipe Out Aerial Convoy Of Huge Gliders Over Tunis Gulf

By Wes Gallagher
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, April 23.—Allied artillery barrages and determined infantry attacks cracked open three salients in Marshal Erwin Rommel's Tunisian bridgehead today, and fighter pilots celebrated another smashing aerial triumph in their destruction of an entire air fleet of 20 mammoth six-engined transport craft loaded with troops and precious gasoline.

With furious fighting covering two-thirds of the Tunisian front, this was the Allied position at dusk tonight:

Preceded by the heaviest single artillery barrage of the campaign, British First Army infantry attacked the German "Verdun" of the Tunisian front—Long Stop Hill, 28 miles southwest of Tunis.

Nearer the coast, First Army infantry attacked on a nine-mile front between Goubellat and Bou Arada and advanced three miles against stubborn opposition to within about 34 miles of Tunis.

Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's Eighth Army stabbed six miles north of Enfidaville along the marshy coastline, while mountain assaults to the west which resulted in the capture of Takrouna were slowed by continuous counterattacks, approximately 40 airline miles from Tunis.

In ten blazing minutes, British, South African and Australian fighters who caught the aerial convoy over the Gulf of Tunis wiped out every one of the 20 transports and shot down 10 escorting planes to carry out what was regarded here as the most important stroke against enemy supply lines since the fighting began.

(The War Department said in Washington that the German transports were Merseburg 323's—not Messerschmitts as previously reported from Africa—and described them as power gliders with six engines, 700 to 800 horsepower, a speed of 125 to 130 miles an hour, and capable of carrying 100 to 110 troops.)

An official statement said the annihilated plane convoy was

War Sidelights

Foe Loses 150 Locomotives Per Month

By the Associated Press

London (Saturday), April 24 (AP).—Combined blows of the American heavyweight bombers and the R. A. F. "train-buster" air fleet against Hitler's rail transport are smashing his dwindling supply of locomotives at the rate of 150 a month, the Air Ministry reported today.

At this rate the Allies are destroying 50 more locomotives in a month than the Fives-Lille plant in northern France, the largest in Europe, can produce in a year, and its production probably has been cut appreciably by persistent R. A. F. bombings.

"The shortage of locomotives and railway material is making itself felt in the heart of Germany as well as in the east and in the Balkans," the Air Ministry said. After the American attack on Rennes all traffic through there was stopped, halting the flow of supplies to the submarine bases of Lorient, Brest and St. Nazaire.

It Ain't Cricket

London, April 23 (AP).—Now that American soldiers have succeeded in teaching jitterbugging to British girls and American slang to the Tommies, some of them are going to take on a more difficult task—teaching the younger generation to play baseball.

lion tons as if they were gross tons with construction totals expressed in terms of deadweight tons. The result, since a deadweight ton is one and one-half times greater than a gross ton, was to show up a large discrepancy between new construction and the assumed sinking total.

Brewster Disagrees

Senator Brewster (Republican) of Maine, told the Associated Press, however, that the same unit—deadweight tonnage—was used in describing the sinkings as well as the launchings.

Brewster and Senator Meade (Democrat) of New York, both members of the Truman Committee, also said the report had been submitted to the Navy and other interested departments several days in advance of release and that no comment had been forthcoming from the Navy.

In reality, Knox said, "there was an excess of construction over losses when the total of all losses was balanced against the total of all construction." However, he added, when only American construction was balanced against all losses a deficit was shown. The total of American construction in 1942 had previously been reported at 8,090,800 deadweight tons and that was the figure used for American construction by the Truman Committee.

Not Criticizing Committee

Knox made a point several times of saying that he did not want to be in the position of criticizing the committee or taking issue with its report generally. He expressed the opinion that it was "a very fair and just report from their point of view" and that he thought it excellent on the whole.

Asked about the committee's statement that the Navy had been too conventional, Knox said "their opinion is always worthy of consideration."

As for the conclusion by the committee that the Navy has placed much emphasis on combat vessels and done a good job but has not sufficiently emphasized escort types used in antisubmarine warfare, Knox said that "the escort ship is a combat type, and so, for that matter, are landing craft."

U. S. Marines Take Over Ellice Group Without a Shot

By Tom Yarbrough
Associated Press Staff Writer

Off Ellice Islands in the South Pacific (Delayed).—United States Marines completed the job of moving into the Ellice Islands a few minutes ago without firing a shot.

It was simply a case of "getting there first." They arrived yesterday morning and met no opposition whatever in planting themselves in the midst of this group of tiny coral isles astride the International Dateline, just south of the equator and on the south flank of the Japanese-held Gilbert Islands.

(A Navy communique in Washington Friday disclosed that the United States had occupied Funafuti in the Ellice Island group and that enemy bombers had raided it April 22. Secretary Knox told a press conference "we've been there for some time and we've got an establishment there" but declined to disclose the time of occupation or the nature of the establishment.)

The Ellice group is 750 miles northwest of Pago Pago in Samoa and 575 miles north of Suva in the Fiji Islands.

More Like Travelogue

When the landing was over and our warships left the atolls—sinking beyond the horizon, as they say in the movies—the whole thing had more the aspects of a travelogue in color than an act of war. The only things missing were soft strains of South Sea music, waving palms and an announcer's voice taking a "reluctant" farewell.

But Americans ashore, in for a rough time at best, had no time to ponder such soft idyls. The Japanese were only about 500 miles away in the Gilberts and the marines were busy preparing a reception for any attempt to dispute their occupation.

The Marines went ashore on Funafuti, a low strip of palm grove shaped like a bomerang, five miles long and one-third of a mile across at the crook, which is the widest part. Funafuti is the biggest of 30 islets forming the Funafuti atoll, which is the best of nine that make up the Ellice group.

Lagoon for Seaplanes

The Funafuti atoll encloses a fine lagoon where seaplanes can be based. Long and flat Funafuti Island might be suitable for an airdrome runway extending the United Nations' aerial search and bomb radius by several hundred miles.

By beating the Japanese to the Ellice Islands, the Marines and the Navy moved up as easily as the Japanese had moved down into the Solomons earlier in the war.

Guarded by cruisers and destroyers, transports slipped into the lagoon single file without a sound except from cruisers catapulting their planes to maintain an overhead watch.

Behind the business of getting there first lay an immense amount of planning.

Funafuti came into sight about dawn yesterday and landing operations began in midmorning in perfect weather. The transports chose an opening in a reef and went in one by one, churning up brown mud as they entered the bright blue lagoon while cruisers remained outside steaming up and down.

Transports lowered snub-nosed landing boats. Filled with fighting men, equipment and supplies they jammed their bows into the beach while bronze-colored natives looked on pleasantly, and from there it was just a task of repeating proces until everything was [illegible] loaded.

an air base. With nearby islets, it forms a lagoon that probably could be used by seaplanes.

Moreover, the island is low and flat and might be made into a base for land planes, if, indeed, it is not already an airfield.

Because of its size, it is not believed that Funafuti could be made into major air center. Secretary Knox, in fact, described it as a "minor base."

Action in Solomons

Yesterday's Navy communique also reported air operations in the Solomons—1100 sea miles west of the Ellice Islands. Big American Flying Fortresses and Liberators, supported by Avenger torpedo bombers, attacked the Japanese base on Poporang Island, which is in the Shortland Island area.

Large fires were started which were visible for 40 miles, the Navy said. The Avenger torpedo planes also attacked a Jap cargo ship near Buin. Enemy fighter planes intercepted and prevented observation of results, but it is believed that hits were scored on the vessels. All our planes returned.

American fighter planes also made attacks Wednesday on enemy positions in the northwestern Solomons. They strafed Jap bases in the Bougainville Strait area and bombed a base near Cape Alexander on Choiseul Island.

Yugoslavs' Fight Called Full-Scale War

By the Associated Press

Bern, Switzerland, April 23.—The unconquered guerilla army of Yugoslavia, reinforced with planes, tanks and armored trains, now is waging full-scale war against Axis troops in rugged upland terrain adjoining the Adriatic, according to a dispatch from Budapest.

Quoting a Zagreb report to the newspaper Magyar Nemzet, the dispatch declared "veritable war" is under way in the Bosnia and Hercegovina regions of western Serbia. Strong Axis operations against the forces of Gen. Draja Mihailovic are "necessary to safeguard this bastion of the continent against possible Allied invasion," the report added.

Italians Admit Losses

The size of the operations was indicated by an Italian admission that in that area last month 1659 Italians were killed or wounded and another 1862 were missing. German forces are engaged, too, but there has been no announcement of losses.

The Budapest dispatch said bitter battles had been waged between "the men of the forest" and German-Italian-Croatian troops. A particularly bloody battle was reported fought on Yan Planina Mountain at an altitude of more than 6500 feet on the Bosnia-Hercegovina border.

The newspaper report said that for six months the Partisans held the Bradina area, birthplace of Dr. Ante Pavelic, puppet premier of Croatia. The dispatch added that "in revenge" the guerillas burned the homes in the town, drove out the population and blew up all railroads in the vicinity.

Only After Fierce Battle

Only after a fierce battle were Axis forces able to break resistance in this area, the newspaper report said, and regain control of the railroads from Sarejevo to Ragusa.

The dispatch said "the men of the forest" displayed no mercy toward the Ustachi, Pavelic's storm troopers, but did not harm the Croatian troops fighting with the Axis, some of whom are enrolled in the guerilla ranks.

The report was one of the first to indicate that Mihailovic's forces had obtained modern war equipment in any quantity. The source of the equipment was not disclosed.

Japs 'Murder' British Prisoners With Bayonets

New Delhi, April 23 (AP).—Official sources declared tonight that the Japanese "murdered in cold blood" a substantial number of British and Indian prisoners of war captured on the Burma front.

Escaped prisoners, the spokesman said, asserted that "the Japs are using British and Indian prisoners of war to carry supplies" and that "those unfit for work were bayonetted to death."

The bayonet was used, said the spokesman in quoting the prisoners, rather than a more humane bullet in order to conserve ammunition.

carrying gasoline and personnel to Tunisia.

"Although not many aircraft were shot down, the size and importance of this victory rank alongside the success of last Sunday when 77 enemy planes, including 58 Junkers-52 transports, were destroyed in one engagement," the air force announced.

Four Allied planes were lost in the lightning-like action featuring yesterday's aerial warfare, which saw the Allies downing a total of 38 planes against the loss of 5 of their own.

The fighter squadrons of the Western Desert Air Force ripped into the transport fleet almost within range of German antiaircraft batteries and blasted all 30 planes into the sea approach to Tunis.

Dwarfing the 3-engined Junkers 52's, which themselves carry 16 to 20 soldiers and 5000 pounds of cargo, these craft are the largest in operation in this war. They have a wing span of 180 feet, compared with the 103 feet 9 inches of the American Flying Fortresses, and can be opened at the nose to take in tanks and trucks.

"They were flying 50 feet off the water," said Maj. J. F. Parson, who led the Kittyhawks and Spitfires against the convoy and shot down two transports himself.

"I first ordered a head-on attack to break up their tight, thick formation and at once five fell flaming toward the sea. Then we went in from all sides and hunted them like wolves until we had shot them to bits."

Flames burst from many of the big carriers. The official statement said some of those carrying gasoline burned a long time after they went down.

"From those carrying personnel scores of troops were seen to climb out and struggle desperately in the sea," it said.

Meanwhile American Bostons and Mitchells bombed and strafed German mountain positions in what an official spokesman called "one of the heaviest assaults of this campaign."

Fighters destroyed seven Axis planes in the northern sector and American Marauders scored hits on shipping, piers and shipbuilding yards in an attack on the harbor of Carloforte, southwest Sardinia.

Mitchells showered bombs on German landing fields between Tunis and Bizerte. Returning pilots said the Germans destroyed one of their own fighters with antiaircraft fire.

On the ground the British First and Eighth Armies were combining in a pincers movement against Axis southern mountain strongholds.

Long Stop Hill guards the pass leading from Medjez-El-Bab into the plain to Tunis. It probably is the most heavily fortified German point on the entire Tunisian front and the scene of the most prolonged and determined fighting.

(The Berlin radio said the "mass attack" of the Eighth Army against the southern sector of the Tunisian bridgehead was "by no means abated in violence although it has already lasted without interruption four days." The broadcast, recorded in New York by the Associated Press, said the southern front extended approximately 25 miles and that Montgomery now could replace tired troops "again and again by fresh and strong regiments or brigades.")

Gen. Sir Harold Alexander concentrated scores of heavy batteries and early last night laid a thunderous barrage on the Nazi steel and concrete stronghold of Long Stop.

The barrage was of the old World War type, placing shells every few feet along the mile-long crest of the hill for more than two hours while infantry crept up the slope.

The taking of Long Stop would clear the approaches to the plain and break one of the key spots in the German defense system.

Farther south long lines of British infantry, advancing between Goubellat and Bou Arada, methodically stormed German hill positions and pushed Axis troops back in rifle and hand grenade fighting for a distance of three miles.

Russians Shatter Repeated Attacks

Air Battles Rage as Ground Troops Lock In Fierce Fighting In Caucasus

By the Associated Press

Moscow, April 23.—While great air battles were fought overhead, the Germans attacked tirelessly in the northwestern Caucasus today in battalion and regimental strength with assaults so heavy as to approach the pitch of a full offensive.

The Russian lines were declared still holding firm.

The invader's army in the Kuban area of the Caucasus around the Novorossisk bridgehead was being reinforced without pause and the enemy was shifting hundreds of planes to the dry airdromes of the Crimea for use in the Caucasian theater.

The destruction by Red airmen of 98 enemy planes in one sector in a single day illustrated the scope and ferocity of air action.

Where the terrian of the Kuban was fast drying under the sun and the spring breezes the Germans had lost up to today about 4000 in dead alone on the ground since the beginning of their attacks. Dispatches to the army newspaper Red Star reported that they were using many Rumanian troops. Some had been forced to spearhead the German charges.

(The midnight communique, broadcast by Moscow and recorded early Saturday in London, said German troops, attacking repeatedly, were hurled back to their original positions, suffering 500 casualties and losing 36 planes.

(The communique also reported the destruction yesterday of 20 German planes southwest of Voroshilovgrad in the Donets Basin, where the enemy has been feeling out Red positions probably with expectations of launching an offensive there.

(On the front west of Moscow the Russians were said to have "consolidated positions," and wiped out 100 Germans attempting a reconnaissance in force.)

Red Star summarized the position by declaring that Hitler was feverishly preparing for new adventures on the Russian front, adding that the Germans now felt the creation of a second front in Europe was inevitable.

"It is obvious," the paper went on, "that the concentration of the main German forces on the Soviet-German front facilitates Allied power to transport battle operations to the European continent."

Inexperienced Youths

The Germans were making the most urgent efforts to attain air supremacy in the Kuban, but there were some indications that the quality of their squadrons had fallen. One group of Nazi pilots shot down was said to have included many inexperienced youths.

Russian pilots were operating American-made planes in some sectors of the Kuban, but not in anything like the number of Soviet-made planes in use.

A German effort to cross the Donets River above Chuguev in small force was broken by heavy Soviet fire. The action was minor, but significant as an apparent attempt to test out the Red army positions in this erstwhile major theater.

(For the second successive day the German command, which previously had been voluble about the Kuban fighting, all but ignored the Russian Front, saying, "No fighting of importance took place on the whole Eastern Front. . . .")

Showdown Seen in U. S., Finn Relations

By Wade Werner
Associated Press Staff Writer

The long-troubled relations between the United States and Finland appeared close to a showdown last night.

Washington eagerly watched to see what bearing the American move of withdrawing some of its legation staff from Finland may have on the question whether Finland is to go along with Germany, or get out of the war and make a separate peace with Russia and England.

However, the State Department simply described the move as an "administrative" one, and declined to throw further light on it.

For some days, reports from Stockholm had told of increasing German pressure upon the Finns. Informed persons in that capital had expressed the belief the Germans were trying to get the Finns to open an offensive on the Leningrad sector in an effort to reduce that city, second largest in Russia. The Germans were said to have threatened full occupation of Finnland unless the demands were met.

But Baron von Mannerheim, Finnish military leader, was represented as determined to sacrifice no more soldiers in offensives. As one observer in Stockholm summed up the situation last week:

"The Germans are no fools. They sense the changes slowly developing in the Finnish political line and therefore are putting in demand after demand in an effort to jam any efforts the Finns may be making to remove German influences or gradually step out of the war."

The six aides who arrived in Stockholm are Lewis E. Gleeck, jr., third secretary; Lieut. Col. Aage Woldike, military attache; Commander Walter L. Heiberg, naval attache; Maj. William F. Neff, assistant military attache; Lieut. Allan L. Rice, assistant naval attache; Lieut. Stanley W. Lipski, assistant naval attache.

In Undersecretary of State Welles' most recent statement on Finnish-American relations, he said that in view of the very real friendship and great measure of understanding between Finns and Americans during the past quarter century, this country hoped the government of Finland would no longer continue the policy of giving aid—effective military aid—to the mortal enemies of the United Nations.

William Allen White, Wife Ill With Flu, May Spend Golden Anniversary in Hospital

By the Associated Press

New York, April 23.—The William Allen Whites of Emporia, Kans., may have to celebrate their fiftieth wedding anniversary next Tuesday, in Roosevelt Hospital, where both are ill of influenza.

"I suppose we really ought to celebrate it over at the circus, in a cage, where people could view us," gentle Mrs. White, full-time partner of her husband in the editing and publishing of their Emporia Gazette, said today.

"Fifty years—the same man—the same woman—but it could never have been any other way," she said. "We go hand in hand, Mr. White and I, even in influenza."

Both were stricken with influenza Monday, and taxied together from their hotel to the hospital. They were here to attend the annual meetings of the Associated ciety of Newspaper Editors, the Press and the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

Across the hall, in another room, the irrepressible small-town editor whose following is Nation-wide, fretted.

"We were planning on taking a second honeymoon trip to Santa Fe, New Mex., where we spent our first honeymoon," he said. "I was a 25-year-old editorial writer on the Kansas City Star, then, and Sallie was a 22-year-old school teacher, and we had a railroad pass from my paper. Then we were going on to Estes Park, in Colorado. We made that trip by stage coach 50 years ago.

"We'll still make the trip. The doctor said we could get out of here Monday. In that case, we'll celebrate our anniversary here in New York with Bill (their son) before starting off for Santa Fe."

"We—oh, all right, all right!" he exclaimed, as the nurse insisted the interview should terminate.

"But stop in and see Mrs. White," he said.

Mrs. White smiled weakly from her pillow.

"I am glad he is feeling good," she said. "Not being able to see him, I get frantic sometimes, but it is just as well we are not in the same room. We'd talk too much. You might think we'd be talked out after 50 years but we're not. We're just beginning."

George Speaks For Trade Pact

Government on postwar policies with respect to other countries. However it has operated in practice, it is the one thing that has been worked out by this Government for trading and cooperating with other governments. If there are any amendments which have a tendency to restrict the powers of this Government in further dealings with other governments, the effect on outside nations will be pronounced."

George said that if Congress now limits the trade basis on which it has dealt with other Nations for eight years heretofore, it would be interpreted abroad as "pretty clear indication that the United States is going to go very slow or refuse to move at all toward postwar cooperation.

"If Russia and England were to conclude we were not going to cooperate in restoration of world order after the war, they might say: 'We had better get together.' One might take Eastern Europe and the other Western Europe, and you would have the same old balance of power again."

The Georgian said that at the very least, any weakening of this Government's position on trade agreements at this time would be a long gamble "and a risk too great for us to take."

Might Affect War

"I would go farther and say any weakening of our position on this act might affect the war itself," he continued. "This war is not over. We haven't yet carried the war to Japan. We may be getting ready to do so, but that is a sanguine statement. In the Pacific we have been fighting a holding, desperately defensive action . . . Nor is the war in Europe over. It is still in a delicate balance. Therefore, I say that any decision that would indicate our unwillingness to go along in postwar matters may have a serious effect on the war."

George said that "nobody can say what seductive offers may be made by the Axis powers to Russia." He added: "They are a realistic nation. If we indicate that we are not going to cooperate, they might say: 'We have to look out for ourselves.' England might take the same view. England might lose hope and faith in our protestations. . . . God only knows what will happen in China—they might say: 'That is your war in the Pacific—it's your problem.' They all desire to be reassured on our course after the war. When you take a realistic view, and consider all of the possible adverse consequences, even in a degree, I don't think this Government can afford to choose. Any restrictions on this act will be taking a long chance in the very midst of a war."

As the first legislation affecting postwar policies to come before Congress, George said he considered the trade extension act more important than all of the pending postwar resolutions.

Whether Republicans as a party will seek major changes had not been determined last night. A major fight had been expected against extension of the Lend-Lease Act, but it fizzled. Members of both parties will have amendments to offer in the House committee, and at least one restrictive change may be proposed by a Democrat. This amendment would give Congress authority by concurrent resolution to disapprove a trade agreement after it was promulgated. While this would be less objectionable to the Administration than provisions for senatorial or congressional ratification, George indicated a showdown fight against a congressional veto of any type.

"I have faith that a majority of the Republicans are going to see this picture as it is, with all of the misintrepretations that will come from such restrictions," said the Senator.

Captured Pilot Defied Japs, Paper Says

By the Associated Press

New York, April 23.—The Daily News, in a copyrighted story from Washington, quotes one American pilot who was captured in the raid on Tokyo and later executed, as hurling defiance at a Nipponese court with the declaration:

"Sure, we bombed your damned town. And we'll bomb it again. We'll bomb it twice and three times. I'll bomb it myself as often as God will let me."

The story, written by Lowell Limpus and appearing in the Saturday editions of the Daily News, added:

"These were the gallant words with which one of the three Doolittle aviators, executed by the Japanese, sealed his doom, as he hurled defiance at a Nipponese court, according to reliable and well authenticated reports which have just seeped out of the island kingdom.

"And the Japs killed him for it.

"But this hero-martyr, so far nameless, like Capt. Nathan Hale of the Continental Army has passed on to his countrymen a slogan to spur them during the coming strife: 'We'll bomb it again.'

Limpus added that the trial of the three American aviators who were executed is understood to have been held late last September. He continued.

"The unflinching behavior of the American prisoners as they faced the death sentence, is partly credited with the recently noticed change in Japanese propaganda . . . the warnings to their own people that they are in for a long, bloody war, because the Americans are a tough people who 'like to fight.'"

The Daily News added:

"The story is that one of the six missing officers set the defiant example—and that two of the other prisoners followed it with such vigor the Japs branded them as 'overly arrogant and insulting' and deserving of the death penalty.

"The name of the original hero probably simmers down to one of the following half dozen: Second Lieut. George Barr, Madison, Wis.; and First Lieuts. William G. Farrow, Washington, D. C.; Robert L. Hite, Earth, Tex.; Robert J. Meder, Lakewood, Ohio; Chase J. Nielson, Hyrum, Utah, and Dean E. Hallmark, Dallas, Tex. The other two also are on this list, or they were, Sergt. Harold A. Spatz, Lebo, Kans., or Corpl. Jacob D. Deshazer, Madras, Oreg."

New Pressure Put On Finland, U. S. Withdraws Legation Aides

long ago declared war against Finland.)

A dispatch from Helsinki said the Finns appeared "surprised and concerned" over the American action and expressed the hope it "would not mean a final breach of relations."

Reliable informants, who could not be identified by name, said the Germans had demanded of Finland that she definitely sign up with the Axis and reopen military action against the Leningrad-Murmansk railway, which carries lend-lease supplies to the Russians.

There has been no new declaration of policy regarding Finland's involved position since the reelection recently of President Risto Ryti and the formation last month of a new government under Premier Edwin Linkomies. There have, however, been indications of serious political tension in Helsinki.

Still Distrust Russia

Finland is the only country fighting beside Germany in which the United States has continued to maintain a legation, and the Finns still appear to admire and respect America despite resentment against American lend-lease aid to Russia. Their distrust of Russia, however, is deep-rooted, dating back beyond the Communist regime to the days of the Czars, when Finland was under their rule.

Finnish forces helping the Germans on the Leningrad front have virtually bottled up the Russian Baltic fleet in the Gulf of Finland. In the Russo-Finnish winter war of 1939-1940 the Russians gained the flourishing Province of Karelia and also Hango, important port facing the Baltic. In the present war Finland has regained it all and a little more. Had Russia been able to hold it, her Baltic fleet would have remained free.

Out of a total population of 3,900,000, Finland has between 300,000 and 500,000 in military service. She is believed to have suffered casualties of approximately 100,000 in the two wars with Russia. A tenth of the country is in ruins.

With only 25 years of experience as a nation, the republic has paid a bitter price in life and property for a lesson in international relations.

Called on Women to Work

With proportionately more men under arms that any other country, Finland has called on its women for much manual labor. They chop trees, swing sledges and repair roads. The country's fuel problem is critical, as she has no coal mines and the war has reduced shipments from her ally, Germany. There is plenty of wood, but labor for chopping is scarce.

In some places, particularly Helsinki, aerial bombings have created a housing shortage. Leather shoes which sold in Helsinki for $3 before the war have been replaced by wood and paper imitations at $4. Fabrics are so scarce that people contribute their hair to the textile industry.

While Finland in various ways has indicated that she would like to get out of the war, she claimed to be so exhausted economically that she was forced to depend on Germany for food and to borrow from Sweden to pay for half the food she receives.

The Germans have exerted increasing pressure to keep Finland in line. Principally the Nazis have been interested in the Finnish army's help in the Leningrad area and in retaining Finnish bases from which her planes can attack Russian-bound convoys from England and the United States.

Potomac Dragged For Body of Coast Guardsman

Harbor police dragged the Potomac River below Key Bridge all day yesterday and last night in a futile effort to recover the body of Gilbert A. Staeffler, 22, second class seaman, who fell from a Coast Guard patrol boat at midnight, Thursday.

According to a report made to police by Lieut. Jack Allen, the boat was moored about 50 feet west of the bridge near the District shore. A machinists mate, Louis P. Baumgartner, heard a splash, Allen said, and when he looked overside saw Staeffler's hat floating on the surface. No trace was found of the seaman.

Police began dragging immediately but their efforts were hampered by swift current and dangerous rocks in the river.

It was reported that Staeffler was a resident of New Rochelle, N. Y. Nothing more could be learned about him from Coast Guard headquarters until a board of investigation completed an inquiry.

Navy Department Reports Washington Man Missing

WOODS

Third Class Gunner's Mate George Everett Woods, 29, brother of James Francis Woods, 213 C Street Northwest, has been reported missing by the Navy Department which yesterday announced 17 casualties in the naval forces, including 2 dead and 15 missing.

Woods, born in Springfield, Mass., came to Washington when he was 5. After graduating from Piedmont, W. Va., High School, he attended Benjamin Franklin School here, where he studied accounting. He was a drug clerk with People's Drug Store for three years before enlisting in the Navy, April 1, 1942.

Also reported missing was Henry Homberg Schwinn, of Baltimore.

The new list brings to 24,926 the total of Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard casualties reported to next of kin since December 7, 1941. The grand total includes 7,147 dead, 4,665 wounded and 13,114 missing.

FCC Man Refuses To Bare Finances

Durr Tells Probers To Enlist FBI if They Suspect Bribery

Federal Communications Commissioner C. J. Durr yesterday refused to provide the staff of the House Cox Committee investigating the FCC with a record of his banking transactions, any investments he might have made in the past five years and other phases of "personal and private financial affairs."

The commissioner made public correspondence between himself and Eugene L. Garey, general counsel for the committee, revealing that he had suggested that if the committee had any evidence justifying such an inquiry it should be turned over to the Department of Justice.

Data Requested

Garey had requested, in a letter dated April 20, according to the correspondence, the following information:

"1. The names (s) and addresses of all banks, trust companies or other depositaries employed by you since January 1, 1937, for the deposit of funds and the name(s) in which such account(s) was carried.

"2. The source of all funds received by you during such period and whether such funds constituted income or return of capital.

"3. In the event any portion of such funds constituted a return of capital please submit in respect thereof a brief statement of all facts connected therewith.

"4. Whether at any time during the period stated you carried funds belonging to you or in which you had or claimed an interest (direct, beneficial or otherwise), with any person, firm, association or corporation, banking or otherwise, other than those institutions named by you in answer to paragraph 1, supra, and whether carried in your own name or otherwise.

Any Safety Deposit Boxes?

"5. Whether, during the period stated, you have had any safety deposit box(es) and, if so, state the name(s) and address(es) of the institution from which the same was rented.

"6. Whether, during the period stated, you have acquired by purchase or otherwise, any real property, and, if so, state the details thereof.

"7. Whether, during the period stated, you have any investment(s) of any kind, and, if so, state the details of such investment(s).

"8. Whether, during the period stated, you had acquired or sold any stocks, bonds, or other securities, and, if so, state the details of each such acquisition or sale."

"Nothing to Conceal"

Commissioner Durr's reply, after a brief acknowledgement of the request, said:

"While I have absolutely nothing to conceal from the committee, it seems to me that the information you are requesting is of an entirely personal nature unless it is for the purpose of ascertaining whether or not I have been guilty of accepting bribes or of similar misconduct in the performance of my official duties. If you have any information which would lead you to feel that further inquiry along this line is warranted, it is suggested that you refer the matter to the Department of Justice."

The investigating committee is headed by Representative Eugene Cox (Democrat) of Georgia, long a bitter critic of the FCC.

Ship Jumpers

French Tars Allowed to Go To Canada

New York Tribune, Inc.)

New York, April 23—Attorney General Francis Biddle has dropped the case against 12 French sailors held since March 10 for jumping ships controlled by General Henri Honore Giraud, permitting them to leave for Canada to join the Fighting French forces of General Charles De Gaulle, it was learned tonight.

About 80 other French sailors who jumped ships, it was reported, already have left for Canada after having been denied exit permits by the State Department since the arrest of the 12 men pending settlement of the case.

Officials of the Fighting French delegation, which has been defending the sailors, were unable to confirm the report that the 12 sailors would leave New York by train tonight for Canada. However, they admitted that the 80 sailors who had previously been denied exit permits had left for Canada "some time ago."

An immigration official disclosed that a settlement of the case had been reached. The immigration and Naturalization Service had no direct interest in the case, it was learned, and had been seeking to discharge it.

The sailors, five from the battleship Richelieu and seven from the tanker Elorn, had jumped ship with many other French sailors to join the Fighting French. They were rounded up on the night of March 9 at New York night clubs and bars and were taken to Ellis Island. They were released from the island April 2 in $500 bail each.

D. C. Flier Killed In Crash of Army Transport Plane

Second Lieut. Howard D. Baer, 24, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Baer, 5433 Forty-First Street Northwest, was one of ten men killed Wednesday night in the crash of an Army air transport plane at Evansville, Ind. The plane crashed while on a routine flight from the Air Navigation School at Selma Field, Monroe, La.

BAER

A graduate of Western High School and of George Washington University, where he was a member of Mu Sigma Fraternity, Lieut. Baer was inducted into the service in September, 1941. He was stationed at Camp Lee, Va., Camp Wheeler, Ga., and received his wings and commission at the Army Air School, Columbus, Miss., in October, 1942.

Besides his parents, he is survived by a brother, Dr. George B. Baer, now serving as a first lieutenant in the Medical Corps in England, and a sister, Mrs. Joseph Naiman, 4201 Sixteenth Street Northwest.

upturns in subscriptions, according to the Associated Press.

That this national reaction to the executions of Tokyo raiders is stupendous goes without doubt.

In the Minneapolis district many were demanding $1000 bonds and on the West Coast women were launching an intensive sales campaign by telephone.

With the 13-billion-dollar loan virtually over the top, many districts were reported by the Treasury to have passed their original quotas and set new goals, as America's answer to Jap atrocities.

A feeble but enraged elderly man appeared at the offices of one of the division chairmen in Washington. He regretted, he said, being able to purchase war bonds totaling only $37.50. "That is all the money I have," he apologized.

Concentrated Effort

Herman Edlavitch, vice president of the Globe Distributing Co., yesterday announced that his workers who have devoted their entire time since April 12 in the sales of war savings securities, had reached a grand total of $235,000.

"We are averaging 150 to 200 sales daily," he explained.

Dr. A. T. Kasmer announced that Beth Sholom Congregation and Talmud Torah issued to members last Thursday its first appeal for war bond subscriptions. Pledges to date total $21,000.

Appeals will be made from the synagogues next Sunday and again Tuesday, Dr. Kasmer said.

Dr. Edward Parsons, Marietta Prexy, Dies

Cambridge, Mass., April 23 (AP).—Dr. Edward Smith Parsons, 79, president emeritus of Marietta College, Ohio, died yesterday in Cambridge Hospital.

Dr. Parsons, an ordained Congregational minister, was president of Marietta from 1919 to 1936. Earlier he was dean of Colorado College. A graduate of Amherst College and the Yale Divinity School, he was a native of Brooklyn, N. Y., and resided in recent years at Jaffrey, N. H.

Jeffers, Patterson Near Showdown

today that parts for unbuilt rubber plants were gathering dust in warehouses when they might be used for warships and that the effect of the rubber directive, awarded to Jeffers by the White House over the protest of the armed services, had been to create "industrial anarchy."

Fear was expressed in naval circles that the War Department and Harold L. Ickes, petroleum administrator for war who has charge of the high octane gasoline program, might seek a similar directive from the War Production Board that would "squeeze" the Navy's urgent needs between the rubber and gasoline programs.

Jeffers was reported to have told friends that he did not believe Washington "big enough" to hold both Patterson and himself. Jeffers and Patterson have engaged in bitter clashes in the past.

Jeffers was said to have described Patterson's statement as "the most violent and unprovoked attack which a public servant has ever had to sustain."

Ickes was reported to have sustained Patterson's version of the situation.

It was learned that Bernard Baruch, author of the rubber report which resulted in Jeffers' appointment, has quietly interested himself in the dispute, to determine for himself whether he believes a cut-back in the rubber program is needed to further the high octane gasoline program.

Baruch declined to comment on the dispute, other than to indicate an attitude of neutrality.

"My only pal," Baruch said, "is the man who is doing the fighting and dying."

Meanwhile, War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson called Ickes, Patterson, and Deputy Petroleum Administrator Ralph K. Davies to a conference to make a rapid survey of petroleum facilities to find ways of producing more aviation gasoline. Jeffers, on his way to Baton Rouge, La., to inspect a rubber plant, was unable to attend the conference.

Tax Vote Expected Today

son (Republican) of Kansas, is sponsoring a 100 per cent Ruml abatement bill, modified to catch windfall income over $5000. Representatives Robertson of Virginia, and Forand of Rhode Island, are expected to renew their fight for a fourth compromise, abating the first bracket 1942 income tax for all persons, although Forand said he would vote in committee to support the Doughton bill as a means of bringing the issue to the floor.

Would Start July 1

All the plans call for starting July 1—if legislation is approved by Congress before May 15—to collect income taxes from wage and salary earners by the same system now used for Victory taxes, withholding regularly from earnings.

Doughton's bill, made public yesterday, would achieve the transition to pay-as-you-go taxation by taxing 1942 incomes at 1941 rates and exemptions, and spreading the resulting burden over the period ending December 15, 1945, on top of current tax collections at 1942 rates. Individuals would have the difference between their tax on 1942 income at present rates and the softer 1941 rates written off, but the upshot would still be that most taxpayers would find their total bill raised this year.

Payments Required

For the individual, these payments would be required this year:

1. One third of the amount resulting from applying 1941 rates and exemptions to the income he reported last March 15.

2. Eighty per cent at least of the amount resulting from applying 1942 rates to 1943 income, on or before December 31 this year. The March 15 installment already paid, and the one to be paid June 15, would be applied toward settling the 1943 tax. Withholding levies from wages and salaries would be applied to settle the 1943 tax debt. Final settlement of the 1943 liability would be made next March 15.

Next year the individual would pay another third of his 1942 liability at 1941 rates, and at least 80 per cent of his tax on 1944 income, before the end of 1944.

In 1945 he would pay off any of the 20 per cent still unpaid on 1944 income, plus 80 per cent of his tax on 1945 income, plus the last third of his 1942 liability.

Present rates and exemptions would be used to measure the current tax on 1943 income. Any rate increases imposed later by Congress, it was expected, would be applied to future years, not retroactively to the beginning of the year in which the rates were changed, as has been the custom.

Service men and women, domestic servants, farm labor, clergymen, and some others would be exempt from the withholding tax.

Those whose income went into the higher tax brackets, and those who received substantial income from sources other than wages and salaries would, under the Doughton plan, estimate their tax on March 15 of each year starting in 1944 (for this year the estimate of 1943 income would be required September 15) and pay it through the year in four equal installments.

The taxpayers would be offered a 10 per cent discount for full payment of the 1942 taxes by next March 15, and a 6 per cent discount for full payment by March 15, 1945.

How Tax Plan Will Affect You

The following table shows what effect the new Doughton pay-as-you-go tax bill, which is to be brought into the House for action on May 3, will have on the pocketbooks of 44 million taxpayers, as far as 1942 income taxes are concerned.

Teddy Roosevelt Kin Lands in Brig In San Francisco

New York, April 23.—One of the 11 fighting relatives of President Theodore Roosevelt marred the family record of distinguished service in this war by landing in the Navy brig in San Francisco yesterday on a charge of desertion.

He is George Emlen Roosevelt, jr., 24, second class seaman in the Navy, a grandson of the late W. Emlen Roosevelt, who was Theodore Roosevelt's first cousin, and distantly related to both President and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

George Emlen Roosevelt, sr., who was a colonel in the last war, was "distressed beyond measure," and his wife, who is young Roosevelt's stepmother, said that "we feel that Georgie was just being wild."

The Twelfth Naval District reported that young Roosevelt was picked up by the Navy shore patrol in San Francisco's swank Bohemian Club because he had been absent without leave from the Navy section base at Terminal Island since February 27. He was in uniform and apparently made no effort to conceal his identity or his playboy activities.

His service record was transmitted to Washington for determination of the case against him. He enlisted in New York on December 16, 1941.

coal strike by May 1, unless the wage deadlock is broken.

Wayne L. Morse, public member of the WLB, took a letter from the full board to the White House yesterday afternoon.

Strike Defended

Earlier Morse had received a telegram from Edward Heckelbech, regional director of District 50, U. M. W. catch-all division which is conducting the Celanese strike, asserting that "the workers are not striking against the Government."

Heckelbech declared that the union had never been accorded a hearing, either by the War Labor Board or the National Labor Relations Board which threw out its petition for certification as the collective bargaining agent for the plant.

"It may very well be that by referring this matter to the President of the United States we will be accorded an opportunity to obtain a hearing on the merits which thus far you and every other governmental agency involved have denied us," he added.

WLB as a matter of established policy has refused to hear any labor dispute "on the merits" while a strike or other form of work stoppage is in progress.

Lewis Remains Silent

Meanwhile, Lewis in New York refused to state whether he would appear at the board's hearing on the coal case today, but representatives of both Northern and Southern coal operators who have been negotiating with Lewis in New York disclosed that they were leaving to appear before WLB.

U. M. W. negotiating committees flatly rejected moves in both the Northern and Southern conferences that the conferences be adjourned at the call of the chairmen, and Lewis declared that the conferences had been disrupted by the failure of Northern operators to appear at a scheduled afternoon session, "in violation of the 30-day extension" of the present contracts.

In New York, a U. M. W. spokesman revealed that the policy committee of the organization had been called to meet Tuesday, to determine a future course of action for the union.

There was speculation that this indicated Lewis plans either to use the Tuesday meeting as an excuse for not appearing at WLB today, or to appear and decline to commit himself on the ground that the situation presented a problem for the policy group to handle.

In the Celanese case, W. S. Landes, company vice president, offered to settle any "bona-fide" grievance through existing grievance machinery—which has been incorporated in contracts with the C. I. O. Textile Workers Union.

More Than Half at Jobs

"More than half our workers are at their jobs despite the present trying conditions," Landes said. "In our opinion, as soon as our workers are given protection from intimidation on the picketline, on the public streets, and in their homes, they will gladly return to their war production jobs."

Meany of A.F.L. Asks President To Cut Food to May, '42, Prices

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

Calling retail food price control under OPA a "miserable failure," George Meany, secretary-treasurer of the American Federation of Labor, called on President Roosevelt in a radio speech last night to order an immediate "roll-back" of retail food prices to the levels of May 15, 1942.

Meany declared that food costs have doubled in the past two years, and that housewives now have no alternative but to pass up the foods which are essential to a balanced diet, but which are beyond the reach of the average family's pocketbook.

He conceded that many workers are now earning more than they formerly made, but emphasized that many others have received no pay increase in the last three years, or have received purely nominal increases, amounting to 3 to 5 cents an hour, or $1.50 to $2 per week. Average pay for all manufacturing industries, including war industries, is only $41 per week, Meany asserted.

"A Flying Fortress is a wonderful instrument of war," he said, "but if it has no fuel it cannot get off the ground. The American worker, as figures prove, is a wonderful producer, but if he does not have sufficient nourishing food in his stomach, he cannot do a job at top speed and at peak efficiency."

Noting that labor is held to wage increases not exceeding 15 per cent, to compensate for the increase in cost of living up to May, 1942, Meany said that food costs have risen rapidly since that time. He cited potatoes, which have risen from 25 cents a peck in January, 1941, to 80 cents now, according to figures from a Midwest industrial city; hamburger, from 17½ to 45 cents a pound; cabbage, from 5 to 15 cents, and boiled ham, for shopworkers' lunches, from 35 to 75 cents a pound.

These increases, which represent from 170 to 250 per cent, he cited as evidence that food prices are "so high that the future of our war effort is seriously threatened."

Meany quoted former Senator Clyde Herring of Iowa, senior assistant to the Director of OPA, as saying that there is nothing in the President's "hold the line" order to prevent price "adjustments" as indicating that food prices may go even higher.

Randolph M. Burruss

Going out one day to cover a police raid on an apartment, photographer Burruss drove up, parked, saw no signs of a raid, so left his camera in the car (to avoid tipping off the raid) while he walked in to investigate. As soon as he opened the door Burruss was grabbed by two detectives—he matched perfectly the description of one of the missing gangsters. Another incident from a photographer's career—taking pictures during the Loring murder case Burruss found himself about to be struck by an enraged man who didn't want to be photographed. Burruss set the flash bulb off in the man's eyes, confusing him temporarily, then stepped back coolly and took the picture. When it comes to identifying Washington notables, Burruss has no trouble—for years he has been taking pictures of them for Harris & Ewing, for Underwood & Underwood, and since 1934, for The Washington Post. Burruss says he was born in Philadelphia and reached for a camera instead of a rattle. Since childhood his passion has been photography and since he was 16 his hobby has been making 16 mm. movies—recently in color. Portraits and commercial photography have been part of his professional career but most of the time he has been a news photographer, chasing the Bonus Army with MacArthur, covering murders, inaugurals, fires, and celebrities with equal calm.

Groups Named To Study Draft Deferments

Announcement was made yesterday of committees in the judicial and legislative branches of the Government to pass upon requests for draft deferments of employes of those branches.

The committees were set up in accordance with the provisions of the President's order of March 6 establishing similar committees in the executie branches.

Chief Justice Stone named Judge Lawrence D. Groner of the United States Court of Appeals, Judge Herbert F. Goodrich, Third Circuit Court of Appeals, Henry P. Chandler, director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts, and Judge William C. Coleman, United States District Judge for Maryland, to pass on all deferment requests for the judicial branch.

The Senate named Senators Thomas of Utah, Maybank of South Carolina and Lodge of Massachusetts to review its cases.

The House named Representatives May of Kentucky, Thomason of Texas and Andrews of New York to its board. First two men named in the Senate and the House are Democrats, and the third member in each committee is a Republican.

Under the terms of the public law establishing these committees no local board may consider any request for deferment of a judicial, Senate or House employe unless the request has been made by one of these committees.

At the same time Congress provided that the director of selective service shall make monthly reports to Congress of the names and positions of persons who have been deferred because of Federal employment. Provision was made that the first of these reports must reach Congress by June 8 and each month thereafter.

Only recently the Costello subcommittee of the House Military Affairs Committee revealed that there were 840,578 men between the ages of 18 and 38 in Government service.

McLean Suits To Be Settled For $400,000

The culmination of two years of litigation over the estates of the late Edward B. McLean and his father, John R. McLean, came yesterday when Justice Bolitha J. Laws in District Court signed the order approving settlement for $400,000 of claims made on the estates.

Edward B. McLean, the husband of Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean, died in a Maryland hospital for the insane in 1941. The elder McLean died in 1916, leaving an estate which was estimated to be worth between 50 and 100 million dollars.

William H. Wadhams, collector of the Edward B. McLean estate, was represented through the lengthy proceedings by Attorneys Arthur G. Lambert and Warren E. Magee, who stated yesterday the distribution of the settlement would be as follows:

Of the $400,000 Mrs. McLean will receive $200,000. Half of this sum will be paid her in $10,000 annual installments and the other half will be set up in the form of an annuity. Her original claim was for considerably more.

The collector of the estate will receive $157,946. Out of this sum $75,000 will be paid to the Government for taxes—this is in settlement of a $300,000 claim; $2000 in taxes will be paid to the District government—in settlement of a $6000 claim, and the remainder of the sum will be used to pay cost of probate and to satisfy creditors who have obtained judgments.

The settlement provides $42,000 to defray the expenses of the lunacy causes and the cost of litigation. Of this sum Attorneys Lambert and Magee will receive $15,000.

Attorney Spencer Gordon, representing the First National Bank of Cincinnati, Ohio, obtained a judgment of $35,000 against the estate. A similar amount is owed to Attorney George B. Fraser and a $19,000 judgment was obtained by Attorney Julius I. Peyser.

To settle these claims and at least 30 more amounting in all to over $200,000 there will be approximately $60,000, the estimated remainder of the fund earmarked for the collector of the estate.

Food Parley Nations

Chile, Iceland, Colombia and Cuba will participate in the United Nations food conference opening at Hot Springs, Va., May 18, the State Department said yesterday.

All told 38 acceptances have been received of the invitations sent to 42 foreign governments.

Take Time Out to Pray

PENTAGON WORKERS—Wearing paper napkins from the cafeteria and other articles for head coverings, Catholic workers prayed at a Stations of the Cross Good Friday service there yesterday. Hundreds unable to squeeze into the little room heard the service through amplifiers. Kneeling at the improvised altar are Chaplain Clement Siwinski and Pvt. Earl Schutzius, Army Air Transport Command server. A Protestant service was held earlier, and another Catholic service later in the day

Good Friday Services Draw Thousands to D. C. Churches

By Robert Tate Alla
Post Church Editor

Citizens with minds on the war yesterday found time for their souls, as the Nation's Capital had its largest general Good Friday observance in many years.

Thousands of the devout, spiritually sharing Jesus' torture on the Cross, knelt at three-hour services and other rites in towering cathedals, humble chapels, parks and even in amid the hustle and bustle of the vast, sprawling Pentagon in Arlington.

More than 2000 Pentagon civilian and military employes attended services that included two Catholic stations of the cross and a Protestant program. Hundreds unable to squeeze into the small auditorium heard the ritual through amplifiers in the corridors on the fifth floor.

Protestant workers were leaving their service at 12:45 p. m. as the Catholic employes were massing for their Stations of the Cross. Air Chaplain Charles I. Carpenter conducted the Protestant program, and Chaplain Clement Siwinski, the Catholic service.

Wear Head Coverings

Catholic workers wore various types of head coverings to their service, including handkerchiefs, gay bandanas, and even paper napkins from the Pentagon cafeteria. White and Negro workers of all ages, women in the majority, prayed side by side. Chaplain Siwinski was assisted at the noonday service by Priv. Earl Schutzius, Army Air Transport Command, as server, both kneeling near a crucifix illuminated by a spotlight on the edge of the platform. Another Stations of the Cross service was at 5 p. m.

Chaplain Carpenter hurried from the Pentagon service to Foundry Methodist Church, Sixteenth and P Streets Northwest, where he participated in the annual Washington Methodist Union Good Friday Three-Hours' service, attended by members of 100 local and nearby churches.

7 Last Words Are Keynote

Dr. Frederick E. Reissig, Federation of Churches' executive secretary; Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, Senate chaplain and host pastor, and a number of other church dignitaries took part in the program, keynoted by "Christ's Seven Last Words on the Cross."

Meanwhile, five blocks away, in the National City Christian Church at Thomas Circle, members of the Disciples of Christ Churches of the Capital area held their annual service, with Dr. J. Warren Hastings as host pastor.

Highlights of the Good Friday radio programs was a message from the Right Rev. Msgr. Fulton J. Sheen, of Catholic University, who said that the meaning of the Cross should infuse into use a willingness to forgive and to be forgiven.

"There is a terrible increase of hate in the world today," he reminded. "Perhaps war increases the tension of people and therefore makes hate. If people only knew every time they hate somebody else they fall victim to that person."

Monsignor Sheen's address was heard over WRC, under the auspices of the Catholic Radio Hour and the National Council of Catholic Men, and was seventeenth in a series on "The Crisis in Christendom."

Prayers for Peace Urged

In a Good Friday statement issued on behalf of the Committee on Religious Life in the Nation's Capital, Dr. Seth R. Brooks, general chairman, urged citizens to "pray for a just and lasting peace and to use the churches and spiritual forces of the city."

"Religious men are not silent, nor will they be. They call for righteousness, justice, brotherhood. They will not yield in their stand for the ideals and ethics of the Ten Commandments and the Sermon on the Mount." Dr. Brooks is pastor of the Universalist National Memorial Church.

Numbers of employes of business firms and of the Government were permitted to attend church, through the efforts of the Committee for the Three Hours' Observance of Good Friday of which Dr. Frederick Brown Harris was general chairman and the Rev. Joseph E. Gedra, assistant pastor of Immaculate Conception Catholic Church, secretary.

Reenactment Draws Throngs

The spiritual reenactment of the funeral of Jesus again drew throngs to the Franciscan Monastery in Brookland last night, where a figure of Christ was carried into a sepulchre symbolizing His burial place. Seals were applied and will be removed Easter morning.

And in Franklin Park, Fourteenth and K Streets Northwest, the weather cooperated in drawing a large crowd of the faithful to the annual Stations of the Cross service of the Washington Catholic Evidence Guild. The Carmelite choir from Catholic University sang.

Meanwhile the USO officials here have announced a number of Easter Sunday religious services and social programs for servicemen.

Six D. C. Area Women to Be Ferry Pilots

Six young women from Washington and vicinity will be among the first class of 23 to be graduated from the Ferry Command School at Ellington Field, Tex., today, it was announced by the Public Relations Office at the field.

Those from Washington are Miss Mary Lou Colbert, 4401 Twenty-ninth Street Northwest, the daughter of Admiral and Mrs. L. O. Colbert of the Coast and Geodetic Survey; Mrs. Jane Straughan, of 29 Madison Place Northeast, the wife of Lieut. Alfred W. Straughan, of the Army Air Corps; Miss Marjorie Jane Ketcham, of 1401 Columbia Road Northwest; Miss Byrd Howell Granger, of 6406 Ridgewood Avenue, Chevy Chase, Md.; Mrs. Dorothy L. Young, of Beverly Park Gardens, Alexandria, Va., the wife of Paul E. Young, assistant chief general inspector for the Civil Aeronautics Authority, and Miss Elizabeth McKinley, of Apartment 4-A, Colonial Village, Arlington, Va.

Miss Colbert an Alaskan

Miss Colbert was born in Juneau, Alaska, and first attended school in Manila, P. I. She was graduated from Georgetown Visitation Convent School here and then attended Wellesley.

She became interested in flying two years ago and eventually obtained her commercial flier's license. After leaving college she was at the Coast and Geodetic Survey office here until she entered the Ferry Command School in November.

Her mother said yesterday she had a sister, Jeanne, who is now attending Duke University. Her father is attending the graduation exercises and the daughter will be home Tuesday for a 10-day furlough.

Mrs. Straughan was born in Washington, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Sincell, 2511 Q Street Northwest. She attended Central High School, worked in the office of Woodward & Lothrop and also at Jelleff's. She then went to work at a plane plant which was then operated at Riverdale.

Miss Ketcham From New York

She was married five years ago. She also entered the school in November.

Besides her father she has two brothers here, William S. and Charles W. Sincell.

Mis Ketcham was born in New York where she also attended school, winning two medals for her art work. She and her family moved here in 1937 and she obtained employment as a private secretary. She became interested in flying five years ago and obtained a pilot's license. From her slender earnings she saved enough to buy a plane. She was a second lieutenant in the Civil Air Patrol until she entered the Ferry Command at its founding.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Ketcham and has two sisters, Betty and Eleanor.

Mrs. Granger although not a resident of Washington has been a frequent visitor of her sister, Mrs. William J. Dale, also of 6406 Ridgewood Avenue, particularly when she was attending Goucher College in Baltimore. Mrs. Granger had been associated with the New York World's Fair and later with Russian and British War Relief.

On November 6 she married Richard C. Granger and he immediately left for sea duty with the Navy. On November 15 Mrs. Granger left for the school. A brother, Frank Scott Howell, jr., with the OPA, lives on Blair Road, Takoma Park, Md.

Mrs. Young is a native of Kansas but the family moved early to Sterling, Colo., where she attended school. It was in Sterling that she met her husband and they were married six years ago. Soon after her marriage her husband taught her to fly.

Darden Opens 30,000-Barrel Oil Pipe Line

Gov. Colgate Darden of Virginia turned a valve yesterday at Richmond to officially open the Plantation Co.'s 180-mile Richmond-Greensboro pipeline which can bring as much as 30,000 barrels of gasoline and oil into Virginia each day.

The entire line taps oil refineries in Louisiana and Texas, starting at Baytown, Tex. Construction of the Greensboro-Richmond line was begun last November 26 and already has been in service. Today's ceremonies were in the nature of a dedication.

Governor Darden said the line would release "hundreds of tank cars for other work." Its construction, he said, "symbolizes the growing power of our Nation and the contribution being made by American industry" to war work.

Maj. J. R. Parten of the Petroleum Administration for War said the gasoline delivered to this Eastern city would not make more of it available for pleasure driving, but would add to the supply for essential needs and for the Army and Navy.

The 8-inch pipe has a daily capacity of 30,000 barrels. It joins at Greensboro, N. C., with a larger line having a capacity of 90,000 barrels per day. The leg into Virginia cost $4,500,000 to build, the company said.

Plantation is jointly owned by Standard Oil of New Jersey, Shell Union Oil, and Standard Oil of Kentucky.

Health Run-Around

Once more the Budget Bureau has thwarted the efforts of health authorities to obtain funds to relieve the menace of a wartime epidemic in this rat-invaded and syphilis-infested Capital. Apparently officials must now plan a third attempt to break this bureaucratic stalemate, without any assurance that it will be more successful than their wasted efforts to date have been. That will give the Budget Bureau time to invent another flimsy excuse for inaction while dangers to the health of this teeming city are multiplied.

The first proposal, as most Washingtonians know, was to use Lanham Act funds for the acquisition of health centers and expansion of health services to meet the city's wartime needs. It is still possible that one or more health centers may be obtained from this source if suitable quarters already built can be found. But the Budget Bureau put a rigid ban on the use of Lanham Act funds for rodent control, public health nurses, general sanitation and maintenance of the housekeeping aides which help to keep the indigent sick out of overcrowded hospitals. After a long controversy with local authorities, it approved an agreement between the United States Public Health Service and the Federal Works Administration requiring that Federal funds for health services be spent only through the USPHS.

There was general agreement as to the soundness of this theory as a peacetime measure. But the Capital was faced by an emergency and the USPHS had no funds to take the place of the Lanham Act appropriation thus moved beyond reach. The hiatus could be overcome only by seeking a new appropriation which the USPHS could administer. It is that request which has now been turned down by the Budget Bureau on the ground that it should have come from the District Commissioners.

The simple fact is that health in the overcrowded Capital is being given the run-around. Funds which could have been used to supplement a meager health budget have been withheld and the Budget Bureau is preventing a reasonable substitute proposal from even going to Congress. If this headquarters of the United Nations is hit by a wartime epidemic while it is so poorly prepared to protect its health, there will be no doubt as to where one large segment of the responsibility will rest.

Rubber Vs. Gasoline

There is nothing strange about the fact that Undersecretary of War Patterson and Rubber Czar Jeffers are pressing rival demands for scarce materials. Mr. Jeffers is charged solely with the task of giving the Nation a new rubber supply. He must necessarily cling to demands for machinery and materials needed to make his program a success. Undersecretary Patterson, on the other hand, must see that our air force is amply supplied with high-octane gasoline. The two programs conflict. The really astonishing fact about this renewed battle is that only crude and uncertain machinery is available for ironing out such disputes. If the Gillette committee, which promises an investigation of the dispute, can highlight this fact, it will render a useful service.

Up to the present Mr. Jeffers appears to have held the advantage. He is a forceful executive who knows his job and how to get it done. He has a definite program admirably laid out by the Baruch committee, and he has vigorously resisted all opposition to it. The trouble arises from the fact that there is no executive or war cabinet of equal forcefulness giving full time to the war effort as a whole. If Mr. Jeffers' particular segment of the war program is out of balance, it is largely because any positive, concrete undertaking tends to forge ahead in the midst of confusion and loose organization.

There can be no question as to where the paramount public interest lies. It is more important to manufacture aviation gasoline to intensify the offensive against the Germans and the Japanese than to have our tires replaced when they wear out. A large percentage of our automobiles can be stored for the duration if necessary. When military requirements for rubber are assured, therefore, preference should be given without question to high-octane gasoline. But either the WPB is wobbling on the issue or the War Department has failed to make a convincing case.

To cover up this lack of forthright administration it has been suggested that the Baruch committee be reconvened to make the inevitable decision more palatable to the public. That jellyfish plea is wholly out of keeping with the powers and responsibilities which have been conferred upon the WPB. If that agency feels it necessary to hide behind the skirts of a special committee in calling for essential sacrifices from the public, its greatest need would seem to be new management with more backbone. Much of the present pulling and hauling could be eliminated by setting up a war cabinet to iron out disputes among the czars. But even a war cabinet would not remove the crying need for allocation of materials where they are most needed to win the war without the squirming and pussyfooting that now characterize the WPB.

Outdoing McKellar

It is difficult to imagine a more vicious proposal affecting Government personnel than the McKellar bill now awaiting action by the Senate. That measure was an indefensible patronage grab in its original form. As it came from the Senate Committee on the Judiciary, however, it is even worse. Friends of good government everywhere ought to rise up in protest against this crude attempt to pervert the Federal service into a political circus.

Senator McKellar's original idea was to make all Government employes earning more than $4500 a year subject to senatorial confirmation. That, of course, would give the Senate a veto power on the appointment of all top officials in the Government. In thousands of cases it would virtually turn over the appointing power to the Senators of the State in which the appointment happens to be made. We could expect a vast number of these important posts to be thus distributed as political plums. Friends of the merit system within the Judiciary Committee made a determined effort to eliminate this provision in favor of specific requirements that heads of departments and bureaus and other policy-making officials be subject to confirmation. As the bill stands before the Senate, however, it makes both categories of officials subject to political clearance.

Of course, all policy-making officials ought to withstand scrutiny by the Senate. But the latest McKellar bill would dip down to the heads of "sections, and other subdivisions" of the Federal departments and agencies. Not only those persons responsible for the issuance of rules and regulations would have to be confirmed, but also all experts, attorneys, draftsmen and perhaps stenographers whose duties include preparation of such rules. Others who would have to be confirmed are "all persons whose duties include participation in conferences or discussions with persons from other departments or agencies." That might sweep thousands of jobs into the political grab bag.

Exemption would be granted to employes appointed or promoted in accord with civil service rules permitting them to acquire a classified civil service status. But a vast number of employes in the war agencies do not acquire a civil service status. Presumably they would have to have senatorial clearance before they could serve their country in posts where their services are most useful. Even employes already within the service would have to run the gamut of senatorial confirmation. To impose such a test upon men who have placed their talents at the disposal of the Government without thought of politics might easily have a disastrous effect upon some war agencies. There is only one safe place for a bill that comes so close to sabotaging the war effort, and that is the ash can.

Tax Outlook

When the House returns from its unearned Easter vacation it will have another opportunity to vote on pay-as-you-go tax proposals. But if the debate is to be wide open, with no restrictions on amendments or on the number of substitute plans that may be offered from the floor, there appears to be little chance that an acceptable proposal will emerge. The most that can reasonably be hoped for under such conditions is passage of some sort of bill that the Senate Finance Committee may eventually be able to lick into shape.

Unfortunately the modified pay-as-you-go plans that now have the respective backing of the majority and minority members of the Ways and Means Committee represent a choice of evils. The new Doughton bill, supported by a majority of the members of the Ways and Means Committee, would in effect provide for complete remission of tax liabilities on 1942 incomes for about seven million individuals in the lowest income brackets. The other 37 million taxpayers would have to make payments on unabated tax liabilities over a period of three years before they would be on a fully current basis. Under the modified plan sponsored by Representative Knutson (Republican), taxpayers would be "forgiven" 75 per cent of the 1942 liability on the first $5000 of income and on any additional earned income up to $20,000. Above that level 50 per cent of the tax would be remitted. Both these measures would involve discriminatory treatment of taxpayers and entail additional payments over a period of years by most taxpayers as the price of being put on a current basis.

Since the House has rejected the Carlson bill, which embodied the principles of the Ruml plan along with reasonable safeguards against individual tax windfalls, it seems unlikely that it will be able to agree upon any alternative plan worthy of consideration. However, there is one proposal on which agreement ought to be possible: that is, the provision contained in the original Doughton bill for a 20 per cent withholding tax on wages and salaries, applicable to the preceding year's incomes. It is most unfortunate that the withholding tax has come to be associated in the public mind with pay-as-you-go legislative programs, since there is no necessary connection between the two. We could shift to a current tax basis without making any changes at all in methods of tax collection. As a matter of fact, it is not feasible to apply withholding taxes to the self-employed or to persons whose incomes are derived from fees, commissions, etc.

On the other hand, a 20 per cent withholding tax would facilitate the collection of taxes due from wage earners and salaried individuals, regardless of whether the payments were measured with reference to last year's incomes or current incomes. The House could, therefore, do a great deal to repair the damage done to its prestige by the tax stalemate if it would abandon the fruitless quest for an acceptable substitute for the Ruml plan and vote for a withholding tax that would assure collection of the taxes that have already been voted.

Davis' Defense

The critics are now in full cry against Elmer Davis and his already widely berated Office of War Information. Not all of the criticism seems germane; some of it, indeed, appears to be politically motivated; and some comes from men who, like Senator Wheeler, desire, not to perfect OWI, but to destroy it. Mr. Davis has been at once dignified and forthright in his defense of this agency, which he has captained for less than a year's time.

In assessing the criticism and the defense, it is a good idea to recognize, first of all, that we need an Office of War Information to give clarity and meaning to the war's complex developments and, secondly, that the task assigned to it is an immensely difficult one. In the domestic sphere, this task may be divided into three main parts:

1. OWI must, as Mr. Davis put it, "deal in one plain commodity—the facts the people of this country need to win the war." It must see to it, in other words, that the public receives as much news as possible about significant events on the fighting fronts and on the home front—within the limits of national security. But the demands of national security are necessarily determined by generals and admirals; no civilian can override them. In the performance of this function it can at least be said for Elmer Davis that he has tried to represent the public's point of view.

2. OWI must see to it that the statements of Government officials afford the people a coherent and intelligible picture of national policy. Since the Government has its own full quota of prima-donnas, the maintenance of even elementary discipline is by no means easy. Mr. Jeffers provides the latest case in point in his tilt with Mr. Davis. OWI under Elmer Davis has at least reduced the confusion prevalent a year ago. In this respect he would have done better if he had had firmer support from the White House and if national policy itself were clear.

3. Although Elmer Davis insists that his agency "is not charged with the maintenance of national morale," it must at least encourage in the American people a sense of urgency about the war, an appreciation of the national danger, an awareness of the great issues at stake, and an understanding of the rich opportunities which lie ahead if we utilize our victory wisely and generously. OWI cannot dodge this responsibility without failing in the very essence of its task. Not even the best friend of OWI could say that Mr. Davis has done at all well in this particular.

In addition to all this, OWI has the difficult job of waging psychological warfare against our enemies, of making its strategy in the foreign field complementary to the strategy of our military, naval and diplomatic leaders. We have hitherto said that Mr. Davis made a mistake in seeking to hold on to this branch of his sprawling organization. He has enough to do to look after the home front without bothering about the foreign front. This conclusion is amply fortified by Mr. Davis' seeming inability to keep track of what is going on in his organization. Doubtless the inquiry of the Senate Committee will show up many shortcomings and many blunders which will make the headlines. It may also lead to a reappraisal of OWI's budget. However, the congressional investigation should mainly be aimed at the discovery and eradication of mistakes. No useful or constructive end will be served by assailing the motives and purposes of OWI and its director or by turning their difficulties into a political shuttlecock.

WHO KNEW NOT WHEN TO DIE

"They shall not pass!" Your cry, a trumpet call,
Petain, resounded through the world that day
You stood undaunted in the dreadful fray
That rose and fell round Verdun's battered wall;
"They shall not pass!" You raised the pride of Gaul,
And kept the savage foeman there at bay:
They could not pass while your faith barred the way,
Though all their bravest in the fight should fall.

O happy Foch and Joffre, your hearts are still;
Your laurels flourish; traitors cannot kill
The glory that stays green about your grave...
"Long life to Petain!" Hear that mocking cry.
Pity your friend who knew not when to die.

Trade Agreements

LATIN AMERICANS watching the Washington scene have eyes for one thing only at present—the fight on in Congress over renewal of the Trade Agreements Act.

What they see is a paradox. Never before has this Nation cooperated with other countries as we are doing today. Never before has there been so much talk about the part we must play in building the postwar world. Yet never since this country began cautiously to move out of isolation has the keystone of international collaboration, the trade agreements program, been in such danger.

The Trade Agreements Act was passed to implement a policy of international collaboration that Secretary of State Cordell Hull announced at the seventh Pan-American conference at Montevideo in late 1933. There were two urgent reasons for our adopting this policy at that time.

One was economic. High tariffs spreading over the world in the late 1920's and early 30's had collapsed world trade. We who had become a mighty exporting nation as a result of the World War had lost two-thirds of our foreign trade. This loss had undermined our industrial economy, leaving millions unemployed.

Act Revised Trade

Trade agreements were a means to revive foreign trade—and with it our internal economy—by opening channels for our goods through the high protectionist walls other countries had raised against us.

The second pressing reason was a political, ultimately a defense, reason. In 1933, both the League of Nations and the U. S.-sponsored Briand-Kellogg peace systems were obvious failures. Germany under Hitler was openly upsetting Europe's balance. Japan had actually begun her power drive in Asia. Equilibrium in the New World was tottering. When Brazil, Mexico, Chile, Uruguay and Paraguay on the eve of the Montevideo meeting subscribed to Argentina's Saavedra-Lamas peace formula, a parade away from the Pan American system toward a New World peace system that left us out was clearly under way. The isolationist United States, already hemmed in economically by trade walls raised against us, was being isolated politically in the New World.

Cordell Hull at Montevideo adroitly stopped the Latin-American bolt by sponsoring the Argentine pact as an inter-American formula. But Latin Americans posed this question: What could our proclaimed desire for peace mean when our tariff policies comprised economic war against our neighbors?

His answer was the trade agreements program. It was a pledge of our willingness to cooperate economically in order to achieve a political cooperation in preserving stability in the New World.

The Trade Agreements Act has accomplished both its purposes. In 1937-38, our exports to agreement countries went up 61.2 per cent above exports in the pre-agreement period 1934-35. The comparable rise in exports to nonagreement countries was only 37.9 per cent. But the inter-American cooperation of which trade agreements are the foundation is far more important to us today than peacetime trade gains.

The plain fact is that if Latin America were not today maintaining peace in this hemisphere and above all getting to us enormous amounts of raw materials for our war plants, the democracies' chances to overcome German and Japanese military power would be tremendously, if not fatally, reduced.

Opposition to Act

Opposition to trade agreements in the Congress has always originated from pressure groups representing (1) industries that are infinitesimal in the American economy and (2) producers who refuse to recognize that as we sell more products abroad, increased home purchasing power means greater home consumption of their products. Their tactics have always been to urge amending the act so that the Senate or the Congress, in addition to outlining the policy as it does in the act, should also pass on each individual agreement after it is made.

Such provisos would automatically expose each agreement directly to pressure groups and require the whole issue to be refought every time an agreement was made.

An impressive list of national civic and business organizations have indorsed the trade agreements. The Republican, Democratic and independent papers that have come out for the act are a roll call of responsbile American journalism. Washington observers agree that even Republican House leadership is reluctant to be identified with scuttling the program. Yet 1943 is a political year and chances that the death-dealing amendments will finally go over were never brighter.

We may confuse and deceive ourselves, but our Latin-American neighbors cannot afford to be deceived about us. Their unanimous opinion today is that if the Trade Agreements Act is amended in such a way that the program can be nullified piece by piece by pressure groups in our Congress, it will be functionally impossible for the American Government to maintain a policy of international economic collaboration. They see this as the death-knell of New World solidarity.

The issue involved in the trade agreements legislation is apparently collaboration or noncollaboration. The lesson of the 1918-1943 era is that when we do not collaborate internationally for peace, ambitious powers work together for war and finally force us out of our isolation. The ultimate choice, then, is not whether we shall or shall not collaborate with other nations. It is whether we shall collaborate consistently to prevent wars or sporadically to fight them.

Murder Most Foul

By Barnet Nover

Behind Japan's Savagery

WHAT WAS said of Napoleon's execution of the Duc d'Enghien applies with particular force to the brutal murder by the Japanese of some of the American fliers captured after General Doolittle's raid on Tokyo.

That was a crime which smells to high heaven, a crime for which Japan herself and the individuals directly responsible will, in the final reckoning, pay most dearly. But it was also more than a crime; it was a blunder.

Nothing that has happened in this war, not even the treacherous attack on Pearl Harbor, has so enraged the American people, so united them in fierce hatred of the savage enemy, so strengthened their determination to fight on to the bitter end as this deliberate and inexcusable violation of the military code.

WHAT DID the Japanese war lords hope to accomplish by this act of murder?

A plausible explanation is that the execution of the American fliers was basically an act of intimidation, designed to prevent further raids on the paper and wood cities of Japan. And substance is given this theory by the fact that the Japanese radio is now warning this country that every American flier participating in future bombing raids on Japan has a "one-way ticket to hell."

It must be noted, however, that this avowal of Japan's determination to flout the laws of war comes a year after the Doolittle raids and months after the death penalty had actually been applied in the case of some of our captured aviators.

IT WAS NOT until October 19, 1942, that the American Government first learned through a Japanese broadcast of the "capture, trial and severe punishment" of the American aviators.

Note the word "punishment." It reveals only to conceal. It suggests that the Japanese military authorities, far from being prepared brazenly to boast of their crime for its possible intimidating effect on Americans, were actually trying to veil the truth.

This can only mean that they feared the consequences of their act rather than expected to derive benefits from it. And that is probably why it is only now, when the facts regarding the treatment of the captured Americans have become known to the American people, that the Japanese are belatedly trying to make some capital out of it.

THE JAPANESE militarists are a savage lot and have repeatedly given vent to their savagery. We need only recall, in this connection, the rape of Nanking, the bayoneting of captured Canadian and British troops at Hongkong, the treatment meted out to civilian internees in the Philippines, Malaya and Shanghai.

Yet the Japanese war lords are not altogether stupid. They know and must have known from the beginning that any and all attempts to intimidate us will meet with failure. So if in the case of captured American fliers they proceeded on a course which they probably realized could in the long run only have evil results for them it could only have been because of some inner compulsion.

IN THIS RESPECT the war's chronology offers us a useful clew.

The Doolittle raid was carried out on April 18, 1942. At that time Japan stood almost at the peak of her power. Wake, Guam, Hong Kong, Siam, Malaya, Singapore, most of the Philippines including the peninsula of Bataan, had been overrun. The hard-pressed American garrison in Corregidor was coming to the end of its rope. The fabulously rich Dutch East Indies had fallen and the campaign in Burma was going altogether in Japan's favor.

The grandiose dreams of Hideyoshi and Yoshida Shoin and the authors of the Tanaka Memorial appeared on the verge of fulfillment. World mastery seemed almost within reach.

It was precisely at that moment that American bombers appeared over Tokyo and Yokohama and Nagoya to reveal in a blinding flash how rickety was the pretentious structure of Japanese power. Each of those American planes was a swallow that heralded a coming summer of disaster for the people of Japan.

THAT RAID, it is plain to see, involved a terrific loss of face for the Japanese militarists and was a blow at the very solar plexus of Japanese morale.

To save face, to reassure the panicky people of the islands, the warlords needed scapegoats. Such scapegoats were to be found in the ranks of the captured American airmen.

If the Japanese warlords did not themselves believe that the trial and execution of these men would or could intimidate the United States into refraining from further bombing attacks on Tokyo and other Japanese cities, at least there was a chance that the Japanese people could be sold such a bill of goods. The murder of the American fliers is thus a reflection of Japan's basic weakness.

The road to victory lies by way of the air over Japan. This blueprint of action the Japanese themselves have drawn up for us—with the blood of our tortured and murdered men.

Trade Agreements

It is interesting to discover that Representative Gearhart is animated by a high moral purpose in his fight against reciprocal trade agreements. He buckled on his armor to prevent the economic isolation of the German Reich. How noble of him.

Without this explanation, an onlooker might imagine that California fears that peace will bring an economic threat which will require another Smoot-Hawley tariff to avert.

Under the artificial stimulus of the last war, California vastly increased her acreage of lemons, raisin grapes, almonds and other produce. After the Armistice our Atlantic States, however, began to import large amounts of lemons, raisins and almonds just as they had formerly. But the Smoot-Hawley tariff fixed that.

Now California not only faces the old threat from Italy and Spain when normal trade shall have been resumed, but a new and rapidly-growing one from the mild, temperate zone of South America. So this Good Neighbor business should not be allowed to get out of hand.

Meanwhile, economic-encirclement talk makes effective window dressing for the fight to restore a trade-killing tariff, and it gives the Gearhart wing of the G. O. P. a touch of international statesmanship.

Washington, April 17.

The Trade Agreements Act extended the benefits of any concessions made by us not only to countries with whom we had most-favored-nation treaties, but to all countries, regardless of whether they had signed treaties with us. The pertinent clause of the act reads as follows: "The proclaimed duties . . . shall apply to articles the growth, produce, or manufacture of all foreign countries, whether imported directly or indirectly." The existence of a most-favored-nation treaty, or, indeed, of any treaty, is not made a sine qua non. Thus is was necessary for this reason for the President to direct that Germany, because of its exclusion policies, "should be denied the benefits of our trade agreements with other countries."

Your use of the term "trade agreements" in your editorial seems to include not only the agreements negotiated under Secretary Hull's program, but also most-favored-nation treaties negotiated prior to the Trade Agreements Act. Nevertheless, the implication seems to be that the benefits extended under the former, as well as under the latter, were limited to those nations with which we were in treaty relation, which, as I have pointed out, is contrary to the language of the Trade Agreement Act.

I can assure you that there is no truth in the statements made by some newspapers to the effect that a majority of the citizens of this island favor independence. An unbiased check-up would show that only 5 per cent of the total population favors the program.

I am a firm believer in Statehood as the only measure that would bring us in closer ties with the United States, and the closer we are with you the more beneficial it would be for us, economically, industrially and politically.

Those who favor the independence of the island are mere idealists who don't know anything about economic welfare or political economy. I believe that to give the island its independence would result in a complete disaster both to the liberty and the welfare of its citizens.

So that there be no doubts as to the political status that we favor, we should be given the opportunity to express ourselves by means of a referendum. This would be the most democratic way and one that would prove to the world the democratic way in which every United States' possession is being treated.

The Once Over

The 75-Cent Haircut

Barbers are jacking up the costs of haircuts. In some cities the 75-cent haircut has been agreed on. We are for the more abundant life among tonsorialists. Theirs is a tedious job. It lacks excitement, color or much hope of future rewards. But we insist, as baldheaded, that their system of rates is screwy.

There are heads with so much hair on them that hair-cutting becomes something of a "project." There is the bushman's bean that looks from a distance like a tropical landscape; to trim this head takes skill, time, effort and patience.

And then there is the head with practically no hair on it whatever. There is nothing to cut. It is just a brief matter of snipping and trimming around the neck and ears. There is as much difference between the work required on these two heads as there is between getting a neglected hedge into shape and taking a few slivers off a fencepost.

If there was ever a case of discriminatory rates, this is it.

Is there anything fair in charging the same price to wash an elephant as to clean a duck?

Does anything justify asking as much for shearing a buffalo as clipping a Mexican hairless dog?

Of course not! Why should the bald-heads stand for it? Elmer Twitchell today called on the baldheaded men of America to revolt.

"We must fight this outrageous discrimination," he declared.

"But how would you have the rates fixed?" we asked. "Some bald heads are balder than others."

"Estimates and bids!" thundered Elmer. "Estimates and bids! Let the barbers estimate what each specific bald-head job is worth. And let them make a bid before the customer climbs into the chair. There are bald heads and bald heads. There are some on which a barber would have to be a burglar to charge more than two-bits. And there are some that might justify a charge of 30 cents. But 75 cents! Never!"

We do not agree with Mr. Twitchell in all details. We think there are some heads so bald barbers should do them free.

Huh? No. Never mind a shave. We're no millionaires!

Maloney Bill

It was a genuine delight to read in your columns this morning that the Senate Committee has unanimously reported out the Maloney bill creating a civilian supply administration.

Senator James E. Murray and his Senate Committee on Small Business will have earned the everlasting gratitude of the American people for bringing them out of the state of being the stepchildren of the War Production Board. It has taken courage and conviction on the part of the honorable Senators to defy Donald M. Nelson and his WPB.

Mr. Nelson has had ample opportunity to give the civilian needs a square deal. He has given them a raw deal. After nine months the Smaller War Plants Corp. is still not functioning right. What guarantee can one have that this would not be the fate of the civilian supply administration if left to the care of Mr. Nelson and his men?

It would also be well for the Senators to bestir themselves about the composition of the top personnel of the coming administration. Time and again they have seen how perfectly good legislation has been ruined by incompetent administration. This must not be the case with the new administration.

cles we disarm ssary to as- German in- dustrial poli- icy. This is the only ef- fective way of stop- ping at its be ginnings any move- ment for se- cret rearma- ment. But this same control can be made to provide the means of accomplishing two other indispensable results: one is the destruction of German economic imperialism, and the other is the destruction of German political imperialism.

GERMAN economic imperialism consists in making barter agreements with weaker countries and corporate alliances through cartels or contracts with the big business of strong countries. Under the barter agreements, as perfected by Dr. Schacht, a small country is made dependent upon Germany as a market for its exports and as a source of its imports. Political and military control of the small country follows inexorably because the small country, once it is entangled with the infinitely stronger economic life of Germany, is no longer free to act independently. To attempt independence is to face bankruptcy, unemployment and social upheaval.

The German system of corporate alliances with big business in strong countries is equally undesirable and dangerous. It played an immense role in blinding the democracies to the German danger and in keeping them unprepared for the war. For these corporate and financial connections, as set up by the German industrial imperialists, entangle, often unconsciously, powerful interests in non-German nations. The German corporations are instruments of the German state: their corporate allies in Britain, France or America are private interests. This is an unequal and unhealthy connection. Arrangements between private corporations and foreign governments are always dubious, and, when the foreign government is an aggressive military power, they are never in the public interest. For when one partner is the agent of a warlike government and the other is a private business, the private business is certain to be ensnared and implicated in measures of which it cannot adequately realize the consequences.

BY CONTROLLING German industrial policy, the barter agreements and the corporate alliances can be abolished, or in any event regulated and supervised. German industry in its international dealings is monopolistic to the core, and therefore incapable of dealing honestly in a world where free enterprise prevails; it is also the avowed instrument of German imperialism, and therefore it is incapable of dealing honestly with nations which may, as seems not unlikely in some cases, decide after the war to have a regulated foreign trade.

For any kind of dealing with the rest of the world, German industry, which is highly centralized in the state, will have to be controlled. For if it is not controlled by trustees from the United Nations, it will be controlled by the Pan-German imperialists. For many decades there has not been such a thing as genuinely independent private corporate enterprise in Germany, and nations which really do have private enterprise must be specially protected in their dealings with German industry.

THIS SAME control is the best means of acquiring a leverage for the political reorientation of Germany. We have seen in the previous articles that if Germany is denied the right to arm, her industry is capable, even after making reparation, of producing a surplus of wealth well above the Hitlerian standard of life. This surplus should be used to wean the German masses away from the military caste, the Junkers, the imperial bureaucracy, and nationalist demagogues and adventurers like Hitler and his kind.

For with this surplus of wealth left over when militarism is prohibited, the United Nations' trustees could as a conscious policy raise the standard of life of the German workers above that which they had under Hitler or under the ill-fated Weimar Republic. That would be the right thing to do in order that the mass of the German people may learn to identify their own welfare with our victory and the world's peace. We need have no regrets about impoverishing the great German industrialists who backed Hitler or the landed gentry from whom come so many of the higher officers of the German army. For the good of mankind they need as a class to be ruined and dispersed, and every encouragement and inducement should be given to promote the rise of new men out of the masses of Germany—of new men who do not carry in them by family tradition the infection of Pan-German imperialism.

FOR THE enemy is not merely Hitler and the Nazi party. Nor is it the German nation, all of it and for all time. The enemy is the historic German governing class, that mixture of a military caste with the feudal landed class and the great industrialists, which has waged wars of aggression of ever greater scope and intensity for three-quarters of a century. This class raised Hitler to power. It is they who organized the force which he has wielded. It is they who will seek to survive, by abandoning Hitler and his Nazis, in order to win another chance to reconstitute the aggressive power of Germany.

It is with them that we have to deal conclusively if this is to be the last German war of conquest. The way to deal with them, when their prestige is shattered by military defeat and authority is ours by virtue of their unconditional surrender, is to liquidate their control of German industry and to use the wealth of Germany to give the German masses a new orientation toward welfare at home and peace with their neighbors.

U.S. Rail Use Attacked

Toledo Line Story

By Francis J. Connor
Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

It's a "treasonable" way to run a railroad.

Such was the sentiment expressed yesterday by George P. McNear, jr., president of the Toledo, Peoria & Western Railroad, as, before a congressional committee, he reflected upon the way he charged the Government is "featherbedding" his road.

And "featherbedding" (labor agreements which he says force overemployment), he avowed to the House Military Affairs Committee, is not only being worked on the railroads by the Government.

"Featherbed rules are a growth of long standing on the railroads, and they have existed for some little time in other industries, such as building construction," he explained, then emphasized:

"With the great expansion of the organized labor business in recent years, featherbed practices are now rapidly spreading throughout all industry. At least one million able-bodied, willing workers are today wastefully employed through the operation of the practice."

House Group Considers Action

Last March a year ago the Government seized T. P. & W.—"230 miles long and less than one-thousandth part of the Class I railroad mileage of the country," according to McNear. The reason: A dispute between McNear and labor unions over—featherbedding issues, McNear charged.

Now the House Military Affairs Committee is considering the controversial proposal to void union agreements not effecting full utilization of manpower and to prohibit unionization of foremen and supervisory employes. McNear assured the committee he favored all phases of the proposal. He amplified his assurances:

"Featherbed rules cause wasteful labor practices.

"For example, the use of five switching crews to switch cars at a terminal, together with the engines, fuel, etc., which they consume, when only three are really necessary to do the work, is a typical illustration of featherbed rules. That is the type of thing the Government has inaugurated on our our railroad.

Operating Statistics Cited

"Actual sworn figures of operating statistics, filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission and showing an increase of 48 per cent in the number of employees on duty to produce only 3 per cent more train miles in a four months period of comparison, will be presented. These wasteful changes made necessary solely by the requirements of the featherbed rules (with the road under government operation) and by nothing else."

And this, he said, was done on the sole responsibility of Director of Defense Transportation Joseph B. Eastman, although not required by President Roosevelt's order.

Ickes Given Power Over Coal Production and Distribution

By William T. Peacock
Associated Press Staff Writer

In a broad extension of his powers over solid fuels, Secretary Ickes received virtually blanket authority yesterday to say how coal shall be produced and distributed.

An executive order by President Roosevelt empowered the Interior Secretary to issue "necessary policy and operating directives" to the solid fuels industries "to assure for the prosecution of the war the conservation and most effective development and utilization of solid fuels."

Making clear this authority extended to all branches of the industry, the order defined "solid fuels industries" as meaning "the development, production, preparation, treatment, processing, storage, shipment, receipt and distribution of solid fuels."

Powers Now Broad

However, "shipment" was defined as not meaning "transportation" and the order specifically reserved to the Interstate Commerce Commission its authority to fix transportation rates.

In addition to the grant of general authority — apparently broad enough so that Ickes could, if he found it advisable, tell a retail coal yard which sizes of coal and how much of each it may stock—the order specifically directed that rationing authorities consult Ickes on any plans or proposals for rationing of solid fuels, and gave him the final voice after advising with the War Production Board.

Aides to Ickes said there was presently no prospect of need for rationing, and suggested this authority was purely precautionary. Rationing is unlikely to become necessary, they added, unless there is a stoppage of production or transportation difficulties develop.

Ickes has set this year's production goals at 600 million tons of bituminous and 65 million tons of anthracite. Current production is abreast of schedules, his aides said.

These goals were set by Ickes as solid fuels coordinator, a title with which he was invested November 5, 1941. That office, however, was largely advisory. Today's order created a solid fuels administration within the Interior Department and changed Ickes' title to solid fuels administrator. He already holds wide powers over petroleum products.

By a second order, Ickes was made a member of the War Production Board. As fuel administrator, he will take over from WPB the distribution of machinery and other supplies among the solid fuels industry. WPB, however, still will determine the over-all amount which can be allocated for such purposes.

The Price Administration was directed to consult with Ickes before fixing or changing price ceilings on any solid fuel.

OPA To Cut Main Staff

Local Boards To Gain

By Edwin D. Gritz
Post Staff Writer

Curtailment of OPA staff operations in Washington to make possible the addition of 10,000 clerks to ration boards throughout the country was announced here yesterday in a move authoritatively described as one of the last major operational changes contemplated by former Senator Clyde L. Herring's reorganization committee.

The announcement also led to the disclosure that the long-awaited formal report on proposed OPA changes will probably not be made after all because desired internal alterations have already been quietly completed.

Only one major project originally studied is in the works, it was learned. This is the proposal to consolidate present separate rent control offices with the price and rationing boards, making one compact operating unit. Action on this is expected to be announced next week.

"Local Boards, Heart of OPA"

Price Administrator Prentiss M. Brown, commenting on the move to equip community price and rationing boards with paid clerks as needed, declared: "Local boards are the heart of OPA. Their work is of the utmost importance in this wartime job. We are going to see that they get the help they so desperately need in carrying out present rationing and price programs."

Curtailment of services, however, will not mean wholesale dismissals, OPA officials pointed out. The addition of 10,000 clerks will be done under OPA'S retrenchment, no-hiring policy established March 1.

Since March 1, budgetary leeway was established by not seeking replacements for many employes who either were drafted, transferred or who resigned for other war work.

The OPA payroll early in March had 4800 persons in the main Washington headquartres and 17,676 at the Washington regional and district offices.

With the additional help, the country's 5500 local boards will have a total of 37,000 clerks to handle all rationing and price programs. Hiring of the additional help will be through the Civil Service Commission.

Budget Being Prepared

Another primary matter now before the OPA Administration, although not within the scope of the reorganization committee, is the agency's budget for the next operating year beginning July 1.

Brown's decision, announced March 11, to keep within the agency's final appropriation of 120 million dollars without asking for a deficiency appropriation of 23 million dollars, which he could get, has necessitated considerable penny pinching.

As a consequence of the many hardships experienced in this "do more with less" policy, which Brown beamed toward OPA critics, the price administrator is expected to ask for a substantially higher appropriation for the next fiscal year.

The request will probably be near if not greater than Leon Henderson's original request for 21 million dollars. Brown is ready to point out that it costs considerably more money to supervise the many additional price and rationing programs now in effect.

Waste Not Evident

Army Extravagance Charges Refuted

By Agnes E. Meyer.

Wilmington, N. C., April 23.—In justice to the Army I would like to deny the widespread reports one hears on all hands about wastage of food in the Army messes.

In the last six weeks I probably have been in more Army camps than any of the critics who are insisting that immense amounts of food are being wasted by the Army. Army officers with whom I have talked admit that there was carelessness when camps were first opened. But the Army has made an organized drive for almost a year to introduce and enforce economy measures affecting food, and I can testify that these measures, to a very great extent, are successful.

One day this week at Camp Davis, near Wilmington, N. C., I had for luncheon a good noodle soup, some pork, mashed potatoes, lettuce and a piece of pineapple for dessert. This particular mess has had nothing but fish or pork recently because beef is practically nonexistent in this part of the country, either for civilians or the Army.

My luncheon was the most nourishing meal I have had in a long trip across the country. Every man in the mess in which I ate finished what he had on his plate. At this camp I asked Col. Adam E. Potts, commandant, what I had asked not only officers, but civilians working with the Quartermaster Corps, how wastage is controlled.

Colonel Potts assured me that the refuse from every mess is weighed and if it is overweight at any of the messes there is a reprimand. At one camp if a man took too much and left food on his plate he was made to eat out of a basket and a sign was put in front of him reading "Chow Hound."

The refuse, which is bound to be large in any Army camp—on an average of 10 per cent—is frequently sold to neighboring farmers and at one camp the farmers complained because they did not get enough refuse to feed their pigs.

At Camp Davis I ate with a few officers and a large group of civil service employes. Each had one pat of butter, but frequently there is no butter whatsoever at this particular camp. And I know this is true at other camps.

I also have been the guest of General Crittenberger at his house at Camp Polk. We had a soup, one piece of chicken, one vegetable, potatoes and dessert.

Never, at any of the camps I have visited, have I seen the thick steaks which some critics are charging are being wasted in the Army mess. The boys in our Army are well fed, but it seems to me every possible effort is being made by the Army to conserve food and to educate the men to accomplish this end.

The Gallup Poll

Sentiment in Four States Backs Legislators On Limiting President to Two Terms

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., April 23.—Four Midwestern State Legislatures have adopted resolutions favoring amending the Constitution to prevent any President from serving more than two terms.

In taking this action, the Legislatures were acting in accord with the views of the majority of voters in the four-States area, an Institute survey reveals.

The States, in the order in which they adopted the resolution are: Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Iowa. The Illinois Legislature in adopting the resolution provided that copies be sent to all other State Legislatures for their consideration and possible adoption. Should 32 States adopt the resolution, Congress must call a convention to consider constitutional amendment.

In order to find out to what extent the action of the four State Legislatures reflected public sentiment on the question within the area comprising the four States, the Institute had field reporters ask voters the following question:

"Would you favor adding a law to the Federal Constitution to prevent any President of the United States from serving a third term?"

The results reveal that a majority of those with opinions, if asked to vote in a referendum today, would favor amending the Constitution to prevent a third term:

Favor two-term amendment	54%
Oppose two-term amendment	46

About one person in every 10 in the area said they had no opinion to give on the issue.

It should be noted, however, that thinking on the matter follows closely along party lines, with a substantial majority of Republicans favoring the proposal and an equally large majority of Democrats opposed.

In the November elections, this area sent 48 Republican Representatives to Congress as against only 14 Democrats. However, the Legislatures which adopted the resolutions were all Republican Legislatures.

Sentiment throughout the whole country on the question has been tested and will be reported in a story appearing tomorrow.

Bolivian President To Visit Roosevelt

By the Associated Press

President Enrique Penaranda of Bolivia will visit the United States next month as a guest of President Roosevelt.

The State Department, announcing this yesterday, said the South American executive is expected to arrive here May 5 and remain in the Capital for about four days. He will visit war industries in Detroit and Buffalo and spend a few days in New York.

Japs Attack Chinese In Northern Honan

Chungking, April 23 (AP).—A determined Japanese attempt to dislodge the Chinese from the eastern tip of the Chunktiao Mountains was reported today in a Chinese high command communique, which said the fighting was intensified as the Japanese threw more troops into the battle in north Honan.

At three points west of the Peiping-Hankow railway near the Shansi border, "both sides suffered considerable casualties," the war announcement said. While the invaders pushed toward the foothills from the south, more than 1000 Japanese attacked Chinese positions north of the mountains in southeastern Shansi, but were "turned back with losses."

R.A.F. to Hit Tokyo, Churchill Says

London, (Saturday), April 24 (AP). Winston Churchill denounced today the "cold-bloded" execution of American airmen by the Japanese and declared the R. A. F. "earnestly look forward to the day when they will be able to fly side by side with their American comrades to attack Tokyo and other cities of Japan."

The Prime Minister said in a message to Gen. H. H. Arnold, commanding general of the American air forces:

"We shall certainly claim for our airmen a full share in this task, which, however long it takes, must be thoroughly done by the combined force of both our peoples."

Loan Default To Give U.S. Big Stock of Wheat

By the Associated Press

The Government will come into possession of about 180 million bushels of wheat a week from today unless several hundred thousand farmer-borrowers in the meantime pay off 225 million dollars in loans extended on the grain last year.

The Commodity Credit Corporation disclosed yesterday that loans on about 160 million bushels of 1942-grown wheat stored in commercial elevators and warehouses and 20 million bushels of 1941-grown wheat stored on farms will fall due April 30.

The loans will not be extended, officials said. Grain not redeemed by that date will be taken over by the Government as full payment of the loans.

Would Mean Loss

Grain officials expect the bulk of the wheat to be turned over to the Government. They explain that present market prices of most types of wheat are a few cents below the loan value. Hence, if a farmer paid off his loan, redeemed his wheat and sold it at current prices, he would lose money.

Some farmers, however—particularly those with a surplus of cash and assured storage space—are expected to redeem their grain and hold it for possible higher prices in the future.

They may be influenced by the prospects of a smaller wheat crop this year and of a higher Government wheat loan rate on the 1943 crop. Farm legislation authorizes price-supporting loans on wheat at not less than 85 per cent of parity. The loan rate on the 1942 crop averaged $1.14 a bushel. This year's loan rate, which will be announced probably early next month, is expected to average about $1.22.

Not Eligible

While the 1941 and 1942 wheat would not be eligible for storage under the new loan rate, grain from the earlier crops would reap the benefit of any advance in the market price which the higher 1943 loan rate might cause.

In addition to the 180 million bushels involved in loans which fall due next week are about 150 million bushels of 1942-grown wheat stored on farms, which farmers may redeem by June 30 or have their loans extended for another year.

The Government wheat could be used for several purposes, including sale for livestock feed purposes and for manufacture into industrial alcohol.

Feed Shortage May Cause Cut In Livestock Output, Davis Says

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

At his first full-dress press conference as war food administrator, Chester C. Davis yesterday reiterated his warning that this country's livestock production, particularly of hogs and poultry, will have to be reduced or leveled off unless farmers find ways to increase feed production above present prospects.

Additional wheat supplies from Canada and Australia and the better use of feed grains now available were pointed to as possible compromise alternatives, but the implications were that Americans cannot continue to count on more and more eggs or more and more chicken to fill the gaps in their wartime diets.

While livestock-increase programs have succeeded beyond all hopes and the country today has record reserves of dairy and beef cattle, hogs and chickens, end of the upward spiral is in sight and eventually consumers may have to fall back on the cereals themselves —rather than depend on the highly nutritive foods that can be produced from them.

Drop in Standard Seen

Feed groups have been saying this and declaring the United States cannot meet its food commitments to its Allies if "a high-protein peace-time diet of milk, meat and eggs" is insisted upon. J. A. McConnell, chairman of the Feed Industry Council, yesterday asserted the only way the war food program can be met "is to use more of our grain for direct human consumption."

The number of "grain consuming livestock" is from 10 to 12 per cent greater than in 1942, Administration Davis said, while the production of feed grains promises to be about 10 per cent less. To add to this predicament, the animals are eating 3:5 per cent more "per unit" than they averaged during the five years 1937-1941.

This year's food supply situation would be a cause for optimism "if one could be sure of the weather," Davis said.

"And there certainly is no cause for any panic among civilians," he declared.

The labor supply is much more favorable than it was a few months ago, he said, and there also has been some improvement in the farm machinery outlook. He attributed the farmer's "easier mind" about the labor situation in part to draft deferments of farm workers.

Davis interpreted an executive order issued by the President yesterday to clarify his duties as war food administrator to be significant in its "wiping out the line" between himself and Secretry of Agriculture Wickard. Before this second order, he said, a "sort of no man's land" existed in the Department of Agriculture and some letters had to bear both his and the Secretary's names. Now each has the power "necessary to follow through' in the performance of their respective tasks, he said.

Refusing to be drawn into the battle over incentive payments to farmers or the future of the Farm Security Administration, Davis said, "We will play this game by whatever rules the President and Congress lay down." He declared, however, that he was interested in the objectives of FSA and thought them worthwhile as "part of the policy of this country."

"If I am asked to testify before the Senate Committee studying the question, I will say this. But I am not interested in getting engaged in a knock-down and drag-out fight about administrative policies of the agency," he declared.

Asked about subsidies in the place of higher prices for food, he declared there will continue to be instances when "if one is to hold the line" subsidies will have to be made. Also, he said he thought the Federal crop insurance program might be utilized to give some protection to farmers who take additional risks in raising war crops. "But that is something for Congress to give attention to, or not, as it sees fit," he added.

Supplements Statements

Davis supplemented his statements about the Nation's feed and livestock supplies with a prepared four-page "reappraisal" of the situation in which it was declared:

"All current indications point to a carry-over of corn and other feed grains from the 1942 crops into the new feeding year which will start this fall about equivalent to the carry-over of old corn and other feed grains into the feeding year starting in the fall of 1942.

"That is, it is expected that the stocks of old corn will not exceed 500 million bushels on October 1.

"This means that the extremely large corn crop of 3,175,000,000 bushels harvested last fall, together with the favorable crop of oats, barley, and grain sorghums harvested in the summer of 1942, as well as 275 to 300 million bushels of wheat, will be fed to livestock during the feeding year extending from the fall of 1942 to the fall of 1943."

Lord Halifax's War-Hero Son Arrives From Cairo for Visit

Lieut. Richard Wood, youngest son of Lord Halifax, the British Ambassador, who lost both his legs in the Libian campaign several months ago, arrived here by plane yesterday from Cairo for a visit with his family. Lieutenant Wood is 22 years old. He was met at the airport by Lord Halifax.

Lieutenant Wood lost his legs in action with the Eighth Army. An elder brother, Francis Hugh Peter Courtenay Wood, died in action with the British army last October. Another brother, Maj. Charles Wood, Member of Parliament, also is serving with the British African army.

Lieutenant Wood plans to make an indefinite visit with his parents. He was accompanied by Capt. P. M. Laign, of the Canadian army, who also lost both legs in the African fighting. He is en route to his home in Canada. Both men were taken by ambulance to the British Embassy.

The plane which brought the two officers to the Capital was a four-motored Liberator. Another passenger on the plane was Walter Kerr, foreign correspondent of the New York Herald Tribune, who has been covering the Russian war for a year and a half.

Kerr boarded the plane at Kuibyshev, on April 16 and completed the 13,000 odd-mile trip in just eight days.

Pink Flamingoes Kept in the Pink

New York, April 23 (AP).—The trio of pink flamingoes at the Bronx Zoo remained utterly unimpressed today, but their attitude didn't dampen the excitement of Zoo officials who announced with pride that a scientific diet, for the first time in history, had made pink flamingoes stay pink even though in captivity.

After 40 years of failure, the Zoo officials had a right even to insist that the pink flamingoes were pinker than they were a year ago

Soldiers Follow Spellman in Rite

Jerusalem, April 23 (AP).—Soldiers clad in uniforms of most of the Allied Nations devoutly followed Archbishop Francis J. Spellman through this Good Friday's Via Dolorosa Precession (Stations of the Cross) in the Holy City.

A large group of American fliers here from Egypt on an Easter leave, fell in line with other Allied soldiers as the New York archbishop, who is Catholic military vicar for United States armed forces, began the procession at 10:30 a. m.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

New York, April 23.—When Singapore fell and the Japs took charge of the Malay Peninsula, well, that's when the baseball pitchers got a break. The Japs put an awful crimp in the ballplayers' batting averages when they grabbed the rubber trees in the East Indies..

POVICH

The United States didn't quite see its way clear to spare any of its precious supply of natural rubber on hand for the baseball-manufacturing industry. So the ballplayers are banging away at balls with ersatz rubber cores, and the results are enough to drive them nuts.

If you don't think there's a difference in the former official ball and the ball now in use, you should hear the ballplayers mutter. Bill Dickey, of the Yankees, who is not a pop-off guy, declares "this ball is a dud. It's the deadest ball I've seen in 16 years in the big leagues. It's a refined beanbag, and just about as lively."

But better evidence is what has been happening ever since the major league season opened. As of tonight, in the 12 games played thus far, clubs have been shut out eight times. Four of the games were won by 1-0 scores. "The pitching isn't that good," says Dickey. "It's the ball."

There's another set of statistics that is just as interesting. In all the games played until yesterday, each club has averaged only six hits per game. Of the 136 hits made, 118 have been singles. There has been only one home run. Whatever else may be said of the Japs, they befriended the pitchers when they moved into the East Indies.

Mention of the words balata rubber is apt to net you a rap in the head from a ballplayer, if he isn't a pitcher. Balata rubber is the cause of all their futility. It's the stuff that was formerly used to cover golf balls, and it is from the reclaimed golf balls that the baseball manufacturers are getting the rubber to put in the cores of their baseballs.

Those baseball cores have been made up in the past of equal parts of genuine rubber and cork, but that latter commodity in its preferred form is no longer available for baseballs, either. The manufacturers are using reclaimed cork from the stoppers of old whisky bottles and other items of salvage. Between reclaimed rubber and reclaimed cork, the official baseball isn't going far when hit these days.

It was supposed to work out all right. A special major league committee had approved the new ball as even more lively than the ball formerly in use. How they reached their deductions, the ballplayers don't know. At Yankee Stadium yesterday there was on exhibition one of the new balls. It was hit once, flattened out, and never regained its shape nor resiliency.

Judge Landis is trying to straighten out the mess, incidentally. He has called another meeting of his committee to see what can be done about restoring some of the jack-rabbit to the dead ball. Tighter winding of the yarn may be a partial answer, plus a better grade of horsehide.

But at this moment, any league is a pitcher's league. Outfielders are playing from 20 to 30 feet closer to the plate in the knowledge that balls aren't going to be hit over their heads. The line drives over the infield that used to drop safe, are being caught because the outfielders are in close. Infielders are coming up with ground balls that used to whizz past them. The whole relation of batting to pitching is out of whack.

Unless liveliness is restored to the ball, baseball may turn the clock back to the decades when one run was precious. In the knowledge that big innings will be scarce because of the dead ball, managers will return to the old devices of getting the important one run—the bunt, the sacrifice hit, the stolen base and the hit-and-run play.

That kind of baseball is good baseball, but somehow the fans have always thrilled more to the tune of the long hit. The game took its greatest stride during the Ruthian era when the Babe was banging his homers out of the parks. That was when the lively ball was first introduced, and the fans liked it.

Another effect of the dud ball has been to cheapen the shut-out victory of a pitcher. Until this season, to shut a team out was something of a feat. The pitcher who held a team scoreless was entitled to a bow. But look at those eight shutouts in the first 12 games played thus far this season. As Bill Dickey says, the pitching ain't that good.

This Is the New Ball Batters Are Finding Tough to Clout

Associated Press WIREPHOTOS

But relief is in sight, as A. J. Spalding & Bros. announced yesterday in New York it had found the defect and would remedy it in about two weeks. Left, Commissioner Landis, Warren Giles of the Cincinnati Reds, and Leslie O'Connor, secretary to Landis, examine the present ball (right), which has a cork and balata center (in front of covered ball). The core (right of cut ball) is made of cork and balata and is covered with balata compound before being wound with yarn. The present reprocessed rubber cement layer between layers of wool was found to harden so as to deaden the ball instead of providing resilience. It is said the new type will correct this.

Ossie's Toughest Job

Bluege Batting .500 In Changing Hurlers

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

New York, April 23.—Ossie Bluege's career as a big league manager has embraced only two games, but already he has discovered the most vexing item in a manager's life.

"It's when to change your pitchers," says Bluege. "That's when a fellow is on the spot. Otherwise the manager's job is pretty routine. But when you get in a tight spot with your pitching, the next move you make makes you either a smart guy or a bum."

In both of the Nats' games to date, Bluege has had to pull out his starting pitcher. One of his changes worked out nicely—in the opening game when he jerked Dutch Leonard for a pinchhitter in the fourth inning and saw Alex Carrasquel hold the Athletics to two hits thereafter. His other attempt at pitching strategy was a flop.

Second-Guessed Self

Bluege made an unhappy choice when he picked Rookie Milton Haefner for the job of holding a one-run lead over the Yankees in the ninth inning yesterday after Early Wynn had been removed for a pinchhitter. Haefner was wild, and the Nats lost the ball game.

"I second-guessed myself when I put Haefner in there against the Yanks," admitted Bluege. "My first urge was to use Carrasquel again. He is a veteran and I know he has control. But Bill Dickey was the first Yankee up in the ninth, and I thought Haefner, a left-hander, might get him out. Haefner walked Dickey, and I kicked myself for not using Carrasquel. Oh, well . . . maybe I'll get smart again."

Bluege is attempting something on the strategic side tomorrow when the Nats and Yankees meet again at Yankee Stadium after an off-day today. He's sending Dutch Leonard back to the mound despite the fact Leonard started on Tuesday, and other pitchers are more rested.

"Dutch only worked four innings against the A's," said Bluege, "and he ought to be ready. Anyway, he's the best pitcher I have, and he wants to work against the Yankees. Leonard can pitch for me any time he thinks he's ready. He's an honest guy who knows more about his own condition than I'll ever know."

Bluege Likes His Club

The Nats will probably meet up with Spud Chandler on the mound for the Yankees tomorrow. The right-handed Chandler has always been a troublesome guy for the Washington club.

Bluege is not at all downcast at the performance of his athletes in the two games they have played, despite their loss to the Yankees yesterday.

"Early Wynn showed me that he's ready to win when he held the Yankees to five hits for eight innings," said Bluege. "The infield is doing better than I had hoped, especially Johnny Sullivan and Ellis Clary. Bob Johnson messed up a ball against the Yankees, but that doesn't worry me. He's a good outfielder. I like our team better now than I did before the season opened."

Athletics Shut Out Boston, 5-0

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, April 23.—The Philadelphia Athletics, with Russ Christopher and Luman Harris combining to hurl shutout ball, chalked up their first victory of the youthful 1943 baseball season today by whipping the Boston Red Sox, 5 to 0, in the only game played in the major leagues.

Christopher, who was charged with the A's first defeat against the Washington Senators last Tuesday, yielded all six hits cracked out by the Sox before weakening in the eighth. With one out, he passed Ulysses Lupien and Rookie Outfielder Ford Garrison.

Connie Mack promptly waved him to the showers and called on Harris to squelch the rally. Harris, who started the season's inaugural, did just that, holding the Sox hitless in the last two-third inning.

The Athletics jumped on Joe Dobson for eight of their nine hits and four of their runs. The other tally was scored at the expense of Lou Lucier, rookie righthander up from Louisville.

The first three runs crossed the plate in the second inning, when the A's thumped out four singles and received help through an error on a throw to the plate by Bobby Doerr. Three more singles, and a balk, produced another run in the third frame. The final counter was scored on a walk, an error, and Joyner White's single in the seventh.

Dead Ball to Die

Majors to Get Livelier Ball in Two Weeks

By Orlo Robertson
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, April 23.—The batters and club owners can stop worrying, for there's going to be a new and much livelier baseball in the major leagues.

Answering widespread objections of baseball men that the new ball was deader than the one approved by the major leagues' committee in December, Lou Coleman, vice president of A. G. Spalding & Brothers, the manufacturer, admitted today that the baseballs sent out for the opening of the season did not measure up to standard.

Fault Discovered

But, in a prepared statement issued from the office of President Ford Frick of the National League, Coleman said the fault had been discovered and that the batters would have a better ball at which to swing in about two weeks.

Coleman explained as follows:

"In the manufacture of baseballs a layer of rubber cement is applied between layers of wool. Under war conditions this cement is made from reprocessed rubber. The cement used on the baseballs turned out by the factory in recent shipments has proved of inferior quality. Instead of providing resilience the cement hardened to a point where the wool was affected. This deadened the ball."

To correct the fault, Coleman said a new type of cement has been tested and accepted.

Rickey Makes Crack

"Balls using this new cement are being manufactured and in tests have met the major league qualifications," he said. "These balls will be shipped out as soon as possible and substituted for the balls now in use. That will take about two weeks."

When enough of the corrected balls have been manufactured, they will be shipped to all of the clubs at the same time and, so far as the National League is concerned will be put in play on the same day.

Complaint over the ball was widespread. Warren Giles, general manager of the Chicago Reds and National League representative on the committee which adopted the specifications for the 1943 ball, voiced his objetcions to both Frick and Commissioner Landis. Giles said the manufacturer had admitted the ball was 25 per cent deader than last year.

Branch Rickey, head of the Brooklyn Dodgers, got off the day's best crack:

"Dead ball!" Rickey exclaimed. "Why, it never even was born. It had no life to begin with."

V.M.I. Squad Held Threat In Track Meet

By the Associated Press

Chapel Hill, N. C., April 23.—The fighting Keydets of Virginia Military Institute loomed today as a potent threat to North Carolina's hope for retaining its Southern Conference outdoor track crown as athletes from eight schools qualified for tomorrow's finals of the annual track meet.

Duke, also rated a good chance at annexing the championship, was handed a severe blow when recurrence of an injury kept Speedster Moffat Storer from qualifying in either the 100 or 220-yard dashes or the low hurdles, his specialties.

McIver Riley, South Carolina's dash man, also fell by the wayside in today's preliminaries. He was nosed out by McClelland of Duke and Ben Lacy of Davidson in the first heat of the 100-yard dash trials, although the time was a comparatively slow 10.1 seconds. Riley won the dash last year in 9.9 seconds.

But another champion emerged from the trials in good shape. Bob Gantt, Duke's all round athlete, placed first in both the shotput, an event which he won last year, and in the discus throw, in which he was second in 1942. He tossed the shot 48 feet and 5-8 of an inch today, and sailed the discus 143.7 feet.

No preliminary was held for the mile in which Rich van Wagoner of North Carolina is defending champion. Riley, Gantt and Van Wagoner are the only athletes participating in the year's meet who took first place in 1942 events.

The Keydets, with Joe Muha taking first place in the javelin throw, placed 13 men in the 8 events run off this afternoon and will send a squad of 20 men into the finals tomorrow. It is the second largest squad left in the meet.

North Carolina, which took 11 qualifying positions today, has a squad of 30 in the finals. Duke will be represented tomorrow by 15 men, and Davidson by 13. North Carolina State has 10 left in the running, South Carolina 6, and William and Mary and Clemson 5 each.

Tony Galento To Referee Here

"Two-Ton" Tony Galento, the "Newark Nightstick," has been booked to referee next Wednesday night's wrestling show at Turner's Arena. The show has been changed from Thursday to Wednesday, Turner's original mat night.

Promoter Turner closed out yesterday with Galento to handle a special two-man team championship tournament—first in the history of local wrestling.

Texan Steals Spotlight at Drake Relays

By the Associated Press

Des Moines, Iowa, April 23.—Jerry Thompson, University of Texas, gambled and triumphed today in winning the 2-mile run, which highlighted the opening of the thirty-fourth annual Drake relay carnival, before 8000.

Thompson, with careful planning and reliance on his terrific finishing speed, conquered Virgil Alston, of Miami University, Oxford, Ohio, the defending 2-mile champion, by 30 yards, with David Clutterham, of Cornell College, Mount Vernon, Iowa, finishing third in a field of seven. The winner's time of 9:31.4 was far behind the meet record of 9:10 established by Greg Rice, of Notre Dame, four years ago.

Seven championships in the university and college divisions were decided and preliminaries also were run off in six events to reduce the fields for the finals tomorrow.

Illinois won both the sprint and medley distance medley relays.

Ralph Tate of Oklahoma A. and M. won the broad jump at 24 feet 7¼ inches, and led the qualifiers in the trials of the 120-yard high hurdles, winning his heat in 14.6 seconds.

Missouri's Joe Shy, sprint champion of the Big Six, led the field of eight qualifiers by taking the fourth preliminary in 9.8 seconds.

Orioles Play 21 Innings, Tie Leafs, 2 to 2

Baltimore, April 23.—In the longest game on record in the International League's 41-year history, the Baltimore Orioles and the Toronto Maple Leafs battled to a 2-2 tie in 21 innings before the contest was called on acount of darkness.

Dick Conger of Toronto pitched 18 innings—or two regular games—before being relieved by Hod Hopper, while Baltimore employed services of four hurlers.

This Sacker Al Rubeling of Toronto opened the fifteenth with a triple but failed to score.

Records showed that Buffalo defeated Toronto 3-2 in 20 innings in 1921, and that Jersey City and Toronto went 20 innings to a scoreless tie in 1913. Baltimore and Montreal played a 4-4 tie in 18 innings in 1911.

Six Illinois Errors Give Michigan Game

Ann Arbor, Mich., April 23 (AP).—Handy Andy Philip, the Illinois basketball whiz-kid who now pitches for the baseball team, held Michigan to six hits today, but his teammates committed six errors behind him to give the Wolverines a 5-to-2 victory in the opener of a two-game Western Conference series.

Chaney Meets Garner Monday In Arena Bout

Charlie Chaney, a 155-pound nephew of George (K. O.) Chaney Baltimore fighting great of another era, has been matched against John Garner, local Negro middleweight, in an eight-round semiwindup on Monday night's boxing show at Turner's Arena.

Featured are Wally Cross, colored Newark heavyweight, who recently lost a split decision to Soldier Al Hart, and Willie Thomas of Philadelphia, Hart's conqueror. They will clash in a 10-rounder.

Chaney, now on furlough from the United States Army, will be making his Arena bow. Garner has won five straight, beating Buddy Thomas, a light-heavyweight, a few months ago. Garner's latest victim was Buddy Holmes.

Promoter Turner rounded out his supporting card by booking Dan Biggers and Mike Enrick, heavyweights, for a six-rounder, and Frankie Maxwell and Billy Lewis, feathers, in a four.

Homestead Grays To Start Season

Led by the most colorful character in Negro basebal, "Candy Jim" Taylor, the Homestead Grays will open their season tomorrow with a double-header at Griffith Stadium. "Mule" Suttles and his Newark Eagles will furnish the opposition.

"Josh" Gibson nad "Buck" Leonard, the slugging twins, who paced the Grays to the championship last season, will be in the line-up, along with Jarry Benjamin, Sammy Bankhead, Judd Wilson and the fleetest-footed base runner of them all, "Cool Papa" Bell.

War Workers May Get Off To Watch Kentucky Derby

By International News Service

Louisville, Ky., April 23.—Kentucky Derby fans are determined to see the "Catch Count Fleet" Derby, to be run at Churchill Downs, a week from tomorrow, or else.

A plan to take time out for the Derby and keep war work going, too, is being worked out by the Batson-Crook Co., contractor for a huge synthetic rubber plant.

The plan would permit some 500 workers to extend their work day to 10 hours and knock off at around noon on Derby Day, May 1, and yet keep production up.

Twenty-one companies of State Active Militia, 90 officers and 781 enlisted men, have been assigned by State Adj. Gen. John A. Polin for patrol duty at the Downs on Derby Day.

Count Fleet took the track this morning for a ⅛ spin, which he negotiated in :38 2-5. This was his first real work since he arrived in Derby town, a longer trial is in store for the Horin hopeful tomorrow, but due to track and weather conditions the cruise today was a short one for "The Fleet."

Before the trial, Don Cameron, trainer, said, "If the injured foot continues to heal in the next 24 hours as it has in the past, there will be nothing to worry about."

Colonial Golfers Defeat Terrors

Special Dispatch to The Post

Westminster, Md., April 23.—George Washington University's golf team lost but one match in defeating Western Maryland, 5 and 1, here this afternoon.

Violet Tracki... Win Three Firsts; Michigan Scores In Sprint Medley

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, April 23.—Notre Dame's Ollie Hunter did his best to make a one-man show out of the first day's program at the forty-ninth University of Pennsylvania relay carnival today but he had to settle for an even break with the well-balanced New York University team.

The crowd of about 5000, having no records to cheer about as the runners went through their paces on a heavy, cuppy track, concentrated on a brilliant double by Hunter, who has been nominated by Greg Rice as America's next great two-miler. The final check, however, showed three first places for N. Y. U. and only two for the Irish.

The Violets captured the quarter-mile relay title, the 400-meter hurdles and the shot put. Notre Dame, with Hunter running the anchor mile, romped off with the distance medley relay title and an hour later Ollie came back to win an easy victory over Dartmouth's Don Burnham in the two-mile run.

Three First Day Tests

That left only three major first day college events for the rest of the field. Michigan's speedy quartet easily won the sprint medley title; Harrison Dillard of Baldwin-Wallace College at Berea, Ohio, upset Virginia's Tom Dodd in the 120-yard high hurdles and Ensign Hugh S. Cannon, former Rocky Mountain district champion, now with Staten Island Naval Base, took the discus throw.

His 2-mile performance was about the same and while the time of 9:24.4 wasn't anything to get excited about, he didn't have to run fast to win by 40 yards or so. Fred Wilt, who set the carnival record of 9:17.6 in 1941, scratched his entry in this race to run against Rice in tomorrow's 2-mile special.

New York University's lone relay title came as something of a surprise. Princeton's sprinters had led the way in the trial heats and were out in front again when Paul Kroehnke and Talbot Adamson ran into some baton-passing confusion. That gave N. Y. U. the lead and Ed Conwell sprinted home well in front.

The other Violet winners were Bernie Mayer, with a shot put effort of 50 feet 3¼ inches, and Art Heerforth, who ran the 400-meter hurdles in 56.7 seconds.

Only in Sprint Relay

Michigan's strong team was able to score only in the sprint medley relay as Bob Ufer, Charles Pinney, Leonard Alkon and Dave Mathews turned in a 3:29.2 to beat N. Y. U. Indiana, whose entry list looked like one of the strongest in the field, scratched all its relay teams and sent out only Lou Saban to take third place in the shot put.

Army and Navy entries, with one exception, failed to get anywhere. Ensign Cannon won the discus throw with 160 feet 2 inches. Camp Lee, Va., failed to qualify for the sprint relay final and was shut out in the sprint medley despite a fine half-mile anchor leg by Private Frank Dixon, former N. Y. U., star and National indoor mile champion.

Briarly Wins Second in a Row

Briarly Military Academy nine won its second victory in as many days on the home field yesterday, easily defeating National Training School, 11-4 behind the two hit pitching of Cordua.

Heavy hitting of Lodge, Nokes and Acton featured for the Red Devils. Chambers and Timmer were the only Trainers able to solve Cordua for safeties.

Two Dog Shows At Towson Get Many Entries

Washingtonians will be well represented at the Baltimore County and Arlington Kennel Club Dog Shows today and tomorrow at the Maryland Country Club, Towson, Md.

Among the exhibitors will be Jouett Shouse, who will show his famous boxers, Keith Merrill and Gordon Barton will also exhibit in the boxer classes. Mr. and Mrs. John Anderson will exhibit chow dogs, as will Beatrice Nesbit. Charles Davis will show Americanbred cockers. Gay Forbush will exhibit bulldogs and in the same classes will compete against the bulldogs belonging to Herbert R. O'Conor. There will be an interesting exhibition of "war dogs," which will include some that have been shown in regular competition. The entries also include many of America's most famous breed, the Chesapeake retriever.

The best in show judge for the Old Dominion Club will be Frank Downing of Towson and on Sunday for the Arlington Club Capt. Ernest Ferguson of Arlington, Va., will be best in show.

Rocco Sisto Rides 2 Winners in Day's Program; Daily Double Only $12.60

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer

Pimlico, Md., April 23.—The green and white colors of H. G. Bedwell, as much a part of Maryland racing as the eighth pole, were borne to a five-length victory today in the Happy Scott Purse. The silks of the Baltimore owner were on the back of Jockey Porter Roberts who was on the back of Sollure, a 3-year-old colt. The crack sprinter, second to Ocean Wave over this track last year, made it two straight since this meeting began and led E. K. Bryson's Mercury, the favorite in a field of five, to the wire. M. A. Cushman's Link, a surprise winner in his first start, was third.

More than 12,000 fans, an outstanding Friday crowd, saw Sollure come from last position to pay a $7.70 mutuel. The track was improving but slow and Sollure was clocked in 1:14 3/5.

Roberts failed to get Sollure away alertly, the colt almost walking out of the gate. However, he soon had the horse under way and he shot him up along the rail. Kopla, a Kentucky Derby eligible who will stay in Baltimore, Mercury and Link, were going along head and head. Roberts sent Sollure up into what appeared to be a blind switch on the rail but got the colt through to take the lead.

Kopla then stopped and Mercury tried to match strides with the Bedwellite. But Sollure was not to be denied and drew out gradually. Roberts, probably mindful that he had taken something out of the colt by heavy usage on the backstretch, failed to let up in his riding and kept his charge to a drive to the end.

The program brought the shortest priced daily double of the show here to date. J. H. Louchheim's Save, a $4.60 shot, won the first race and Bayborough, owned by Eddie Talbert of Washington, took the second at a $3.50 mutuel. Successful investors in the "double" collected $12.60.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SAVE, $4.60, $2.80, $2.40; GRAMPS IMAGE, $4.50, $3.30; BOW WAVE, $4.30.
SAVE outbroke field, shook off BOW WAVE to draw out and was kept to hard drive through stretch to hold GRAMPS IMAGE safe. GRAMPS IMAGE was in first flight from start, responded when placed to drive and closed with good energy. BOW WAVE had keen speed while forcing early pace and weakened gradually.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1000. For 3-year-olds; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 12:36½. Off at 12:37. Winner, E. Talbert's b. f. (3) by Stimulus—Scarborough. Trained by R. Curcan. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:14⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BAYBOROUGH, $9.50, $5.50, $3.20; PARSIGHT, $9.10, $5.40; FAIRY TRACE, $12.30.
BAYBOROUGH was rated while in first flight early, responded when shaken up entering stretch, displaced FAIRY TRACE and came willingly thereafter. PARSIGHT was brushed early, came wide while improving position and closed with bold rush to be going fastest of all. FAIRY TRACE went to front at once, set good pace but weakened badly in final three-sixteenths.

Daily Double—SAVE and BAYBOROUGH Paid $12.60.

THIRD RACE—About 2 miles. Purse, $1000. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Steeplechase. Start good. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 1:00½. Off at 1:00½. Winner, G. H. Bostwick's br. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SIMOON, $7.30, $4.30, $2.80; PICO BLANCO H, $5.30, $3.10; BAY DEAN, $2.60.
SIMOON was steadied for turn of field, came willingly when placed to drive and wore down PICO BLANCO H to take command and won with speed in reserve. PICO BLANCO H was under hand ride for opening mile, went to front of BAY DEAN boldly when asked, but could not stay with winner and made bad landing at fifteenth fence. BAY DEAN set pace while steadied early but weakened after a mile.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1200. For 3-year-old maidens. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 1:31½. Off at 1:32½. Winner, Alan T. Clarke's b. f. (3) by Mowles—Linton Neil. Trained by A. T. Clarke. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:15⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NELLIE MOWLEE, $7.00, $4.00, $2.90; TENEBROSE, $7.50, $4.40; MISTRELLA, $5.10.
NELLIE MOWLEE was sent to contention on inside early, came out for racing room approaching stretch and wore down TENEBROSE to win going away. TENEBROSE was in first flight on outside from start, disposed of SPARKER to take command and tired gradually while under punishment. MISTRELLA was snatched up when in close quarters early and came willingly at end.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1200. For 3-year-old maidens. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:01½. Off at 2:03. Winner, Bokeby Stable's br. c. (3) by Jean Valjean—Float. Trained by J. T. Skinner. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:14⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SOLLURE, $7.70, $3.40, $2.80; MERCURY, $2.80, $2.40; LINK, $3.20.
SOLLURE, off slowly and rushed to contention on inside, was lucky to get through on rail, took command and was kept to drive to end. MERCURY was well placed from start, raced between horses early, drifted out entering stretch and failed to rally. LINK was forward factor early, was eased back when in close quarters, saved ground entering stretch and closed willingly.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1000. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:01½. Off at 3:02. Winner, J. W. Y. Martin's b. g. Capital to Greet Easter With Impressive Sunrise Services Attended by The

Religious-Patriotic Rites To Be Held on Capitol Steps

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Church Editor

Christians of the Nation's Capital tomorrow will greet Easter with impressive sunrise services, expected to draw thousands of worshippers.

Dr. Blackwelder

Leading sunrise services will be at the Arlington Amphitheater; Fort Lincoln Heights, Blandensburg Road and the District Line, Jefferson Memorial, the Capitol Steps, and George Washington Masonic Memorial on Temple Hill, Alexandria.

Dr. Fred Pierce Corson, president of Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pa., will address the annual Easter sunrise service at Arlington under auspices of the Grand Encampment of Knights Templar, and it will be preceded by a parade from the west gate of the cemetery, led by the United States Marine Corps band. A cross of lilies will be placed on the Unknown Soldier's tomb after the service.

Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, pastor of Reformation Lutheran Church and president of the Washington Federation of Churches, will address the Fort Lincoln Heights service, sponsored by the D. C. Organized Bible Class Association. More than 25,000 attended the first such service there last Easter. The choirs of Calvary and First Baptist and New York Avenue Presbyterian Churches will sing.

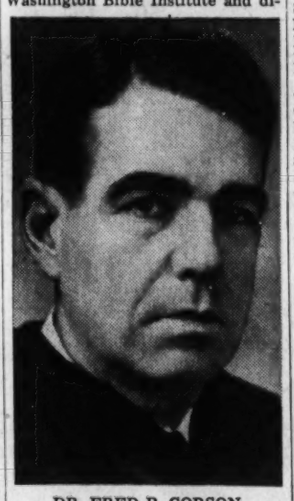
MR. BOWERS

The Washington Federation of Christian Youth, an organization of the Washington Federation of Churches, in cooperation with the Covenant-First Presbyterian youth fellowship, will sponsor services at 7:30 a. m. on the Jefferson Memorial steps. The Rev. Leslie L. Bowers, pastor of Third Christian Church, and former president of the Young People's Conference of the D. C. Sunday School Association, will speak on "The Light Is Still Shining."

Wartime Easter morning religious-patriotic services on the east steps of the United States Capitol Sunday at 8:30 o'clock will be broadcast to American forces in land and at sea via short wave.

Washingtonians, soldiers stationed hereabouts, and all visitors to the city over the Eastertide are invited to assemble on the east plaza of the Capitol to hear Easter music by the United States Navy band under the direction of Lieut. Charles Brendler, the Male Telephone Glee Club led by Robert Davidson, a guest soloist still to be selected and a principal address by Capt. Robert Workman, chief of Navy chaplains.

Invocation will be by Capt. John F. Curruthers, former chaplain of the U. S. S. Oklahoma and the benediction will be pronounced by Glenn Wagner, president of the Washington Bible Institute and director of the Youth and Service Men's Fellowship. A responsive reading of the American Creed will be led by John C. Page, eldest son of the author, William Tyler Page.



DR. FRED P. CORSON, Dickinson College president, will address Arlington Easter sunrise rites

The honorary sponsoring committee includes Senators David I. Walsh, Robert Reynolds, Charles Tobey, Charles Andrews, Alexander Wiley, Arthur Capper, Robert Taft, Hattie Caraway, Bennett Champ Clark and Pat McCarran.

Congressmen on the honorary sponsoring committee are: Victor Wickersham, Fred Norman, John Murdock, Andrew J. May, Jennings Randolph, Edward McCowen, Winifred Standley, J. Percy Priest and Karl Mundt.

Eugene Meyer, James Colliflower and Kirk Miller, Washington civic leaders are cooperating with the program committee which is made up of Jack W. Gates, Sarah Elizabeth Nye, Lou Randall, H. F. Ramsdell and George Herman Kendall, president of the Capitol Fellowship Forum.

Boothby's Sunday Topic Announced

Evangelist Robert L. Boothby, Bible lecturer, who is conducting a series in the Bible Auditorium, Fifth and F Streets Northwest, has announced as his subject tomorrow night: "Where Would the Apostle Peter Go to Church if Living in Washington? What Did Peter Teach was Nailed to the Cross?" The service will begin at 7:30 p. m., with a singing service directed by Leslie Mansell.

The evangelists are heard in a daily radio program on Station WOL, every Sunday morning at 9:45, and Monday through Friday at 11:45 a. m.; also every evening, Monday through Friday, on Station WWDC at 6:15 p. m., and Sunday evening at 5 o'clock.

Combined Chorus Sing Tomorrow

The combined junior and senior choirs of Calvary Methodist Church will open the 11 a. m. service with an antiphonal by Palestrina, "The Strife Is O'er, Allelujah." Anthems will include "Our Paschal Joy" by Pietro Yon, "Come Ye Fatithful" by Tittcomb, and "Christo Triomphante," by Yon. The organ prelude will be "Improvisation on Easter Alleluiah" by Tittcomb, and the postlude, "Christus Resurrexit" by Ravanello.

Wagner Directs 24th Radio Rally

The twenty-fourth Christian Youth and servicemen's radio rally will be held tonight at Almas Temple, 1315 K Street Northwest, under the direction of Glenn Wagner, president of the Washington Bible Institute.

George A. Miles, outstanding Christian layman of Washington and former college athlete of Michigan, will be the speaker of the evening. Mr. Miles is director of activities of the local Laymen's Evangelistic Association with which over 100 Washington Christian laymen are associated.

A broadcast will be released direct from the temple at 8 p. m. over Station WOL. Free suppers served by the Christian Business Girls Association will be given to uniformed men and women of our country. The public is cordially invited to the weekly rallies at the temple.

Presbyterian Choral Vespers To Be Sung

Choral vespers will be sung by the chancel, youth and children's choirs tomorrow at 5 p. m. at Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, under the direction of Theodore Schaefer, organist. Another musical program will be given at 11 a. m. Soloists will be Bernice Rickman Girdon, soprano; Henrietta Bagger Plum, mezzo-soprano; George Barritt, tenor, and Lieut. (j. g.) Gordon Barnes, United States Naval Reserve, baritone.

The Central Presbyterian Church will present "Allegro" (Second Sonata) by Borowski, organ prelude, "I Know That My Redeemer Liveth" by Handel, sung by Miss Maud Chalfont, soprano soloist, "The Strife Is O'er" by Palestrina on the chimes, "Hosanna" by Granier, sung by Earl Carbuth, baritone soloist, and "The Lord Is Risen" by Rachmaninoff-Noble. At 8 p. m. "The Head That Once Was Crowned With Thorns," by Mason, will be featured on the chimes.

The Takoma Park Presbyterian Church Choir, under the direction of Lotte Volmer, will sing "Christ Is Risen" by Dickenson and "I Heard Two Soldiers Talking," a traditional anthem, at 11 a. m. Miss Elizabeth B. Jackson, organist will play "Maestoso," by Borowski, "Song of Spring" by Brewer, and "Paean" by Whitlock.

Northminster Presbyterian Church will present the following program at 9:45 and 11:15 a. m.: "Easter," organ prelude, by Rimsky-Korsakov, "Welcome Happy Morning" by Haydn, "Awake Thou That Sleepest" by Maker, "Lift Your Glad Voices," a soprano solo by Miss Anne Evans by C. B. Hawley, "Hallelujah" by Lorenz, and "Christ Is Risen," postlude, by Ashford.

Miss Nancy Poore Tufts, organist and director of music at the Georgetown Presbyterian Church, has planned the following program: Tocatta from Widor's Symphony V, organ and trumpet prelude, "All In the Morning" and "Easter Flowers," carols by the youth and senior choirs; an anthem, "All Creatures of Our God and King" by Chapman and organ postlude, "Christ Is Risen" by Saxton.

Special music at the Church of the Pilgrims will include: "Christ the Lord Is Risen Today," descant by Misses Hazel Shaffer, Elise Merriam, and Elizabeth Adams; "They Have Taken Away My Lord" by Stainer, "Jesus, Friend of Sinners" by Grieg-Dickinson, and "The Lord Bless You" by Dinning.

An organ recital by Warren S. Johnson will be given at 7:30 p. m. The hymns will be "The Strife Is O'er" by Palestrino, and "They Have Taken Away My Lord" by Stainer.

Dr. Reissig to Speak

Dr. Frederick E. Reissig, executive secretary, Washington Federation of Churches, will address Easter services of the Chinese Community Church tomorrow at 3 p. m. at 1011 L Street Northwest.

Daughter of Hero War Victim Writes of Resurrection

(The following article is deeply expressive of the eternal Easter spirit of victory over the tomb—that there is no death when there is memory and Christ's own reassurance that, through His death on Calvary and His Resurrcetion, we shall again meet with loved ones who have passed on.

Miss Marcia Crouter, the author, is a sophomore in the College of Arts and Sciences, American University. Her father, Commander Mark Hanna Crouter, executive officer of the cruiser San Francisco, lost his life in action off Guadalcanal in November, 1942. Miss Crouter's essay has been highly praised by Dr. Paul F. Douglass, American University president, and faculty members.)

"Amid his wide variety of poetic subjects, Robert Burns has touched upon one theme in his "Highland Mary" which I have heretofore shunned in my reading, yet which now holds my interest above all else. It is death. Death—the most natural, the most miraculous thing in the world. Everyone knows that to die is as natural as being born, and everyone also knows that sooner or later death will come close to him and bring with it a soul-shaking and terrible experience. Yet few of us like to dwell on the subject—this is understandable—at least, not until the blow falls and it becomes necessary to work out some sort of adjustment.

Marcia Crouter

What is there about death that brings grieving? Surely not the presence of death—for there is nothing in so natural an event that could cause sorrow. Fear of the unknown? Perhaps, although most common sense religions obviate that as well, "O Death, where is thy sting?" I think the tragedy of death lies in the utter unbelief, the vain attempts at comprehension which assail those left behind. In our home, as in so many American homes these days, there came an official Navy telegram stating the simple fact "killed in the performance of his duty and in service to his country." It was not hard to believe and yet it was impossible to believe. We knew there was danger. Yet how could someone so real and vital be dead? Robert Burns faced the same agonizing confusion at the death of his sweetheart Mary Campbell, and he did what so many of us do at such times: He wrote. He wrote about their last meeting. He described Mary in one breath, beseeched her to look down at him in the next. Unable to make the final break in his own mind, unwilling to believe that she was dead and beyond his calling, he wrote to her; and then, realizing that she could never display her own charms, he wrote about her, so that her personality might not be lost to the world.

That was one of my chief feelings when the news came about Daddy. My first impulse was to write, to record as much as I could to make him live again. I wanted to record everything—his twinkling blue eyes and heartwarming smile, his silly little songs he used to sing, everything that made him alive, not dead, for he was one of those people who just aren't connected with deathly things. I suppose many people are discovering that about their freinds. Why ruin a beautiful memory, which can be almost like having the person present, why stigmatize with heart-rending sorrow the memory of the person you loved? Why not realize that the sorrow lies only in the bereaved one's inability to understand, and that there is really nothing in the death itself to be sorrowful for.

Comdr. Crouter

There is another strong feeling that death brings to those left behind. Burns had it and displayed it in all his elegies. There is a great reluctance on the part of the grief-stricken person to make his loved one a mere memory, although that, of course, is almost inevitable. Time has a way of causing the picture on the mantel and the few odd trinkets and newspaper clippings to symbolize the person who has gone. Again the only solution seems to be in writing, as Burns did, and in trying to catch the essential reality of the person rather than a mere description of him.

For the first time I am being forced to live in the past, for Dad is not a dead hero of today. He is a warm vital comrade of yesterday. He "still within my bosom's core shall live," and I pray that some day I may present him to the world just as Burns presented his heroine Highland Mary."

Centennial Joins Easter At St. Paul's

The congregation of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, Connecticut Avenue and Everett Street Northwest, tomorrow will combine its 100th anniversary celebration with the Easter commemoration.

Dr. Henry W. Snyder, pastor, will preach at 8:30 a. m. on "The Promised Dawn," and at 11 a. m. on "Life Begins at Easter." Children will be baptized at 3 p. m., and the Sunday school will have a service of praise at 7:30 p. m.

St. Paul's was formally organized Easter Sunday, April 15, 1843, and for many years its congregation worshiped at Eleventh and H Streets Northwest. The congregation moved to its present site in 1931, and now occupies the first unit of a proposed English Gothic cathedral-type structure.

The centennial fete will continue two weeks.

Easter Rites At Pentagon Announced

Workers on Sunday duty tomorrow at the Pentagon have been invited to attend Easter services in the aduitorium there conducted by chaplains of their faith.

Chaplain Clement Siwinski of the Chief of Chaplains Office, will celebrate Catholic mass at 12 p. m., and Chaplain Harry Lee Virden of the Chief of Chaplains, Office will lead the Protestant observance at 9:30 a. m.

Organists for the two services are Sergt. Virgil Fox of Bolling Field, and Corpl. David Babcock of Langley Field, Va.

Christians Offer Easter Program

The choir at Third Christian Church will present a solo by Jeanette Poole, "Hosanna" by Grainier, "In Joseph's Lovely Garden" by Dickinson, and an organ postlude, "The Hallelujah Chorus" from Handel's "Messiah." At 5 p. m. a baptismal service will include "Lovely Appear," by Gounod, and "He Is Risen" by Emerson.

"JESUS CHRIST IS RISEN TODAY"
LATIN 14th CENTURY
Jesus Christ is risen today,
Alleluia!
Our triumphant holy day,
Alleluia!
Who did once upon the cross,
Alleluia!
Suffer to redeem our loss,
Alleluia!
Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS
This favorite Easter hymn, with its swelling Alleluias and spontaneity of joy, is no doubt a translation of a 14th Century Latin hymn. The melody is now one of the most famous of all Easter carols.

Sacred Easter Musical Offerings Planned in District Churches

Music will play an important part in four of the six Easter Day services in Washington Cathedral, and to carry out the extensive musical program of the day the choirs and choirmasters have been working diligently for the past several weeks with a result that the musical portions of tomorrow's services will be eminently fitting to a wartime observance of the Resurrection of Our Lord.

Musical services will begin with the celebration of Holy Communion at 7:30 a. m. in the Great Choir of the Cathedral, with music by the full choir of men and boys under the direction of Ellis C. Varley, acting organist and choirmaster. Special music planned for this service will include the offertory anthem, "The Day Draws On With Golden Light," by Geoffrey Shaw.

The Cathedral junior choir, under the direction of Dr. Max Cushing, assistant organist and choirmaster, will sing the musical portion of the 9:30 service of Holy Communion in Bethlehem Chapel. Music for this service will include that of the liturgy and a group of hymns to be sung by the choir and congregation.

The full choir will return for the 11 o'clock Festival Service of Morning Prayer, Holy Communion and sermon and will be accompanied by the great organ of the Cathedral augmented by trumpets, trombones and tympani from the National Symphony Orchestra. In addition to the hymns and liturgical music for this service, two special anthems will be offered: "Unto the Paschal Victim Bring" by John E. West, and Handel's "Hallelujah Chorus."

The choir will sing a third service at 4 p. m., the musical portion of this service to include an anthem.

Easter solemnities at St. John's Church, Lafayette Square, will begin with a celebration of the Holy Communion at 6:30 a. m. The choir under the direction of Wesley I. Steele, organist-choirmaster, will sing "Joy Fills the Morning" by Lotti, and the "Missa de Sancta Maria Magdalena" by Willan.

At 7:30 there will be a second celebration of the Holy Communion, without music, followed at 9 by a children's service with presentation of mite boxes and morning prayer. The sermon will be preached by the Rev. Howard A. Johnson.

With music by Noble, Rheinberger, and Lotti, the Holy Communion will again be celebrated at 11 o'clock. The Rev. Dr. Howard Chandler Robbins will be the preacher. Bairstow's "The Promise Which Was Made Unto the Fathers" is to be the offertory anthem.

Holy Communion will be celebrated in French at 4 p. m. by the Rev. Dr. Florian C. J. Vurpillot for the congregation Francaise.

The Rev. John G. Magee, minister-in-charge, will preach at the 8 o'clock service of evening prayer.

Music at the Church of the Ascension will be under the direction of Dr. Max Cushing, organist and choirmaster. The following selections will be offered; prelude, "Journey of the Holy Women" from Gounod's "Redemption," "As It Began to Dawn" by Vincent, and postlude from "The Redemption."

* * * *

St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Rock Creek Parish, will present the junior choir at 7:30 a. m. Communion and at the Children's Eucharist at 9:30 a. m. The senior choir will take over at the main Easter service at 11 a. m. They will sing: "Welcome Happy Morning" by Sullivan, "Gloria" by Meineke, "God Hath Sent His Angels" by Parker, "The King of Love" by Dykes, and "Hallelujah Chorus" from "The Messiah" by Handel.

Musical offerings at St. John's Episcopal Church, Georgetown, at 11 a. m. will include: "Hallelujah" by Mozart, "At the Lamb's High Feast We Sing" by Elvey, "Gloria in Excelsis," and "Jesus Christ Is Risen Today" by Lyra Davidson. The 6:30 a. m. service will be identical with the addition of "By Early Morning Light" by Dickenson.

* * * *

The McKim Memorial Tower Chimes at the Church of the Epiphany will play Easter hymns at 7:15 9:15, 10:45 a. m. and 7:45 p. m. Adolf Torovsky, organist-choirmaster, has planned the following hymns for the 11 a. m. service:

"Welcome Happy Morning" by Sullivan; "Now Christ Is Risen," Twelfth Century melody; "Bethlehem's Own" by Garth Edmundson, and "An Easter Litany" by Dickinson.

The Episcopal Church of the Ascension choir, Silver Spring, will offer the following musical program tomorrow: "Jesus Christ Is Risen Today," "Allelujah! Death Is Conquered" by Tamkins-Deis; "At the Lamb's High Feast We Sing," Sevenfold Amen" by Stainer and "Come Ye Faithful."

Easter music at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, near Washington Circle, will include "Christ Our Passover," by Schilling; "Jesus Christ Is Risen Today" and "The Day of Resurrection." Soloists are Mrs. Eleanor Westergren Brall, Miss Irene Werzel, Miss Frances Mohan, Miss Frances Tucker, Dr. Charles Randolph Hughes and James De Valse Mann.

St. Margaret's Episcopal Church will present a harp prelude by Dorothy Remsen, the anthems, "Welcome Happy Morning" by Fortunatus, "Come Ye Faithful" by St. Kevin, "Jesus Christ Is Risen Today" by Worgan; "Christ Our Passover" by Mornington and "As It Began to Dawn" by Martin.

The St. Thomas' Episcopal Church Choir will sing at 8 and 11 a. m. tomorrow. The music will include: "Tollite Hostias" by C. St. Saens; "Easter Meditation" by M. H. Sheridan, and "How Excellent Thy Name O Lord" by Handel.

Welcome Service Planned Tomorrow

The "Washington Welcomes You" committee will sponsor a service tomorrow at 3 p. m. on the Pilgrim Steps of the Washington Cathedral, with Canon W. Curtis Draper, jr., presiding, and John Bayless, curator of the Cathedral, speaking on "Washington's Dream Realized."

Those wishing to go in groups are asked to meet at the Roger Smith Hotel, Eighteenth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest, at 2 p. m. The "Washington Welcomes You" programs are sponsored by the Washington Federation of Churches' Defense Commission. There will be organ music by Pvt. Paul Callaway, now on leave of absence as Cathedral organist-choirmaster.

Sala Lectures Tomorrow

Emeric Sala of Canada, lecturer and world traveler, will lecture tomorrow at 8:15 p. m. at the Baha'l Hall, 1308 I Street Northwest, on the subject of "Postwar Reconstruction."

Troops to Take Easter Tours Of Holy Land

Tours of the Holy Land for servicemen of all faiths, arranged by the American Red Cross in the Middle East, are part of the Easter season observance for U. S. troops in that area, according to cable advices received here this week.

Jerusalem is the favorite leave area for American troops in the Middle East theater. The Red Cross initiated the Easter tours April 16. Headquarters of the servicemen on leave is the Red Cross Telaviv Club in Jerusalem, where quarters were enlarged to accommodate the influx of men, including opening of an officers' club.

Residents of Palestine have registered guest invitations at the club for servicemen of the Jewish faith during Passover.

A special sunrise service on Easter Sunday will be held in the Church of the Holy Sepulchre in Jerusalem.

The cable advices state the American Red Cross has arranged special features for the observance of the Easter season in all of its clubs in Middle East points, as well as in the military hospitals to which its staffs are assigned.

The Red Cross reports that American military men visiting Jerusalem are well grounded in Biblical history, and know in advance the points they wish to visit. For men with short leave periods, one-day tours to the shrines in Jerusalem and Bethlehem are available; tours for men with longer leave include visits to Jericho, the Dear Sea, Nazareth, the Sea of Galilee and other historic and religious shrines in Palestine.

50 to Sing Four Easter Selections

Easter at the First Congregational Church will be marked by four services, starting with the 11 o'clock service, at which Dr. Howard Stone Anderson will preach on "Man's Greatest Hope." The A Cappella Choir of 50 voices will sing four Easter numbers as well as singing descants for two congregational hymns. Paul Gable at the organ will play several appropriate selections. A large group of new members will be received at this service. Babies will be baptized.

Three showings of the "King of Kings" will be given tomorrow—at 3, 5:30, and 8 p. m. This completes the Holy Week engagement of Cecil DeMille's great motion picture depicting the life of Christ. The expenses of the showings are met by freewill offerings.

Meets Next Friday

The annual meeting of the Washington Lutheran Inner Mission Society will be held April 30 at 8 p. m. in the parish hall, Luther Place Memorial Church, Thomas Circle, with Dr. J. Harold Mumper, president, presiding. A revised constitution will be presented for consideration and new board members elected.

Albright Offers Easter Music

Special music at the Albright Memorial Evangelical Church, Fourth and Rittenhouse Streets Northwest, will be the same at both 10 and 11:30 a. m. The selections include "Resurrexit" by Frelacey, "Jesus Christ Is Risen Today" by Lyra Davidica, "Christ Our Passover" by Schilling, "Easter Alleluia" by Shure, "Low in the Grave He Lay" by Lowery, "Easter Carol" by Bush, "Worthy Is the Lamb" and "Hallelujah Chorus" by Handel, "The Day of Resurrection" by Smart, and "Christ Is Risen" by Ashford.

Anthems Mark Baptist Services

Anthems to be sung tomorrow at 11 a. m. at Metropolitan Baptist Church will be "They have Taken Away My Lord," by Harrington, and "Why Seek Ye the Living Among the Dead?" by Warren. "Angels, Roll the Rock Away" will be sung at 7:45 p. m. Gilbert A. Clark is choir director, and E. Woodley Kalehoff, organist.

Memorial Church Music Planned

Miss Mary E. LaFrance, minister of music at the Universalist National Memorial Church, and H. Jerome Graham, organist, have planned the following program for the 11 a. m. service: Organ prelude, "O Sons and Daughters of the Lord" by Guilmant, "Gloria" from the Twelfth Mass by Mozart, "By Early Morning Light by Reimann-Dickenson, "Christ Triumphant" by Yon, "Great and Glorious" by Haydn, and a choral benediction, "The Lord Bless You and Keep You" by Lutkin.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

U. S.-Mexican Relations The Best Ever

U. S. EXPERTS accompanying the President on his historic trip to Mexico found a new type of problems confronting the two nations—far different from those of several years ago.

Not many people are worrying much about oil, though that question still remains unsettled. Nor is anyone bothering about the famous tract of no-man's-land, Chamizal, which Mexico and El Paso both have bitterly claimed for half a century and which was a controversial haven for bootleggers back in prohibition days.

Instead, one of the most difficult among our problems is trying to persuade Mexico to ration tires. Most Americans can sympathize with Mexico in this. She raises her own rubber, refines her own gasoline—and plenty of it—also has her own tire factories.

So it is awfully difficult for the Mexican automobile owner, far removed from the war, to wax enthusiastic over putting his car in the garage part of the week to provide more rubber for his Gringo neighbor to the North. Nevertheless, the optimistic State Department is plugging this.

Technical Problems

Most present U. S.-Mexican problems now arise out of the war—such as getting more railroad cars for Mexico, getting strategic materials to erect a high octane gasoline refinery, whether Mexican oil tankers shall operate with the U. S. Fleet, getting Mexican workers for U.S. harvest fields. Some of these are technically difficult, but do not arouse antagonism.

So on the whole, U. S.-Mexican relations never were better. Underlying them, however, has been a growing Mexican fear that with our big Navy, our tremendous Army, we might develop the dictator-imperialist complex after the war and go berserk with our once "good neighbors." This undercurrent has been fanned by our treatment of Spanish republican refugees in North Africa to which Mexico will not give a haven.

So the Roosevelt-Avila Camacho visit should do worlds of good at this time.

Premium on Bad Behavior

Diplomatic dispatches from Switzerland indicate displeasure with United States policy which rewards pro-Fascist nations, such as Spain, and indirectly punishes the friendly nations, such as Switzerland.

"We have been strictly neutral and well behaved," say the Swiss, "and consequently the Board of Economic Warfare, while pouring supplies into Spain, pays no attention to us."

Chairman of the Board of Warfare is Vice President Wallace, brother-in-law of the Swiss Minister to Washington. However, that makes no difference. The State Department sets the policy of appeasing Spain, and Wallace's BEW has to folow it.

Food Conference Secrecy

Assistant Secretary of State Dean Acheson did some fast backtracking when called before a closed-door meeting of the House Foreign Affairs and Agriculture Committees to explain the reasons for the proposed banning of the press from the International Food Conference at Hot Springs, Va.

He explained that 43 countries will be represented at the conference, with five official delegates and five alternates each, making a total of about 430. Argentina would not be represented, he said, because the delegate list had been limited to countries which have broken relations with the Axis and have subscribed to the "four freedoms."

"There might be some unfortunate consequences if we turned reporters loose on these 430 people," the Assistant Secretary of State continued. "A lot of feature stories might be written about their peculiarities of language and customs, and possibly their comments on the conference might be misinterpreted. We want to avoid anything of this nature from which other nations might take offense."

Representative John Vorys of Ohio, Richard Kleberg of Texas, Karl Mundt of South Dakota, Victor Wickersham of Oklahoma and other "free press" champions of the two committees quickly pounced upon this statement, contending that it was inconsequential and not proper grounds for excluding the press from the Hot Springs sessions.

"Do you want to keep the American people from knowing what develops at the conference from day to day?" they asked.

No War Secrets

"It seems to me," broke in Mundt, "that one of the best ways we can assure the rest of the world that we are fighting for the four freedoms is to guarantee freedom of the press. Will there be a lot of war secrets discussed at this conference, things the public should not know about?"

Acheson replied that he knew of no subject to be discussed which might be classified as a "war secret."

The object of the conference, he explained, was to "analyze" the postwar food needs of each participating country, from the standpoint of production, distribution and consumer demand. Plans would be formulated at the conference and possibly future conferences, Acheson said, to meet these needs.

"The United States will make no commitments at the Hot Springs meeting," Acheson explained, "We want to get at the facts, so we will have a basis for planning against famine and suffering after the war is over."

He revealed that the meeting would be devoted solely to civilian food needs after the war, but that the President was considering another international conference, in which the United States would invite other nations to participate in a discussion of the food which United Nations armies would need before the war ends.

Mail Bag

H. M., Long Beach, Calif.—It is true that the War Department is shipping beer to United States forces in foreign theaters of war. Beer is not a part of the Army ration, but is available for purchase at the post exchange. The Army claims that despite the precious cargo space the troops demand beer.

S. T., Washington, D. C.—The ban on birthday greetings by wire covers everybody, including soldiers in the United States. In other words you cannot send a birthday greeting or any message of greeting to any soldier in this country.

Americanization Group Aids Symphony Fund

Faculty and students of the Americanization School, after an intensive campaign, have presented the National Symphony Orchestra with six $25 memberships, or a total of $150, it was announced yesterday.

Money was gathered via coin boxes placed in each classroom; a campaign song was written and a lantern slide made of it for school assemblies; frequent community sings and lectures were given. In addition, $100 was realized through a concert given by violinist Milton Schwartz and his sister Phyllis last Friday.

It was also announced that, through its principal, Mrs. Anna Rose, the Chevy Chase Elementary School contributed $58 to the sustaining fund drive which has a goal of $115,000.

A final report on the campaign will be made Monday at a luncheon in the Statler Hotel.

Fund Denials Severely Jolt Health Setup

The District's lagging public health program received two major blows yesterday when the Commissioners learned that the Budget Bureau had finally and decisively rejected a petition for $256,744 Lanham Act funds for health services, and that the Federal Works Agency had cancelled a previously promised grant for construction of a 135-bed temporary general ward for Gallinger Hospital.

The grant for the hospital was denied because the War Production Board would not give priorities for the construction materials, the Commissioners were told. Acknowledging the need for additional hospital facilities, the WPB nevertheless held that the need was even more acute in other cities. Commissioner Guy Mason said last night that he expected a pending petition for a venereal disease ward would likewise be refused.

Advised to See Congress

In finally saying no to the request for funds to enlarge the public health services to meet the emergency needs of a city swollen in population because of the war, the Budget Bureau ruled that the Commissioners should get these funds by asking Congress for a deficiency appropriation to meet these needs rather than getting them from the Lanham funds, Health Officer George C. Ruhland was told verbally yesterday.

The Commissioners are to meet Monday with Dr. Ruhland and Budget Office Walter Fowler to decide which of the items should be requested of Congress. Mason said that the present economical tinge of the present Congress might indicate it advisable to ask for an appropriation somewhat more modest than the $256,744 that had been asked as a grant.

Major Items Sought

The most important item on the list of projects sought was $26,656 for the rental, equipment and maintenance of three health centers, in Deanewood, Anacostia and another Northeast section. Rated second in importance by the Health Department was $15,641 for the establishment of a bureau of mental hygiene, which it was believed would cut down juvenile delinquency, crime and social disease in the District.

The struggle to get these funds has been unsuccessfully conducted for months by the Commissioners, who feel that Washington's health problems occasioned by the influx of warworkers fall within the provisions of the Lanham Act which was to make loans and grants for communities with extraordinary emergency needs. The money to finance these purely duration projects should come from this source rather than from the District taxpayers, the Commissioners believed.

Smashing Pepco Window Lands Merchant in Jail

Elisha Kashaba, 58, of 903 Thirteenth Street Northwest, is going to spend the next 30 days in the District Jail meditating a strange moral victory over the Potomac Electric Power Co.

Kashaba was arrested Thursday for smashing a plate glass window in the Pepco Building, Tenth and E Streets Northwest. He told the judge yesterday that he smashed the window after being informed that he must deposit $20 instead of $10, as he expected, to have electricity installed in his candy store.

Judge George D. Neilson told Kashaba he must pay a fine of $85.84, cost of the smashed window, or go to jail for 30 days.

WPB Puts Radio Repairs on Basis Of Part for Part

Radio repairs went on a tube-for-tube and part-for-part basis yesterday.

A War Production Board order, effective immediately, requires that an old part be turned in when a new one is bought or is installed by a repair man.

Excepted from the regulation are rural residents who can buy only by mail. Anyone who has lost the part to be replaced also can obtain a new one by certifying that the replacement is essential.

Dealers must take used parts to scrap heaps or salvage stations within 60 days after receiving them.

Wall Street Uses Holiday To Press War Bond Sales

By the Associated Press

New York, April 23.—Wall Street abandoned its long established custom of observing Good Friday as a holiday today and devoted its undivided attention to the second war loan drive.

The Stock Exchange, Curb Exchange and outside securities markets were closed as usual but throughout the District brokers' offices were open, most of the staff was on hand, and every worker, from top to bottom, got an early start on previously mapped plans to get the highest possible total of war bond orders before the day was over.

The opening of brokerage offices for taking subscriptions was widely advertised in newspapers and customers men kept telephone lines working telling their clients they were there to do business—urgent, pressing war loan bond business.

The Street had a most favorable background to start the day's work. At the conclusion of a monstrous rally in front of the Subtreasury Building at Wall and Broad Streets late yesterday it was announced the the Second Federal Reserve District had far surpassed its three-billion-dollar goal and promptly had set out to boost it at least another billion.

Plans for today's activities were rehearsed on the floor of the stock exchange right after the close yesterday when 3000 brokers, pages, clerks, telephone operators and others gathered for a pep rally. Emil Schram, president of the exchange, told the gathering he would do some bond selling himself today and then repair to Victory Loan headquarters and check the totals as the brokers telephoned the results of their work late in the afternoon.

The Stock Exchange and the entire brokerage community has taken a leading role in the sale of war bonds since the current conflict began. Early in 1942 the exchange publicly recommended the purchase of a specific security for the second time in its long history by urging acquisition of war loan bonds in newspaper advertisements all over the country. The first time this ever happened was in the midst of the last World War when a like recommendation was made.

Individual brokers with offices all over the land have promoted the sale of Government securities by a variety of methods, including advertising, personal solicitation and setting up of investment counsel departments in their offices. In industrial centers crowded with war workers special drives have been made to induce employes to put part of their war-swollen earnings into Government bonds every pay day.

E. P. & L. Appeals 'Death Sentence'

Boston, April 23 (AP).—A brief filed in the Circuit Court of Appeals today by the Electric Power & Light Corp. seeks to set aside a Securities and Exchange Commission order calling for the company's dissolution under the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935.

A similar action was entered by the American Power & Light Corp.

The Electric Power brief asserted that the commission was seeking to impose a "death sentence" penalty although, it contended, such penalty was not authorized by the act and was contrary to the intention of Congress in enacting such legislation.

Electric Power also asserts that, though it is given one year from August 22, 1942, to comply with the SEC order, compliance is virtually impossible.

Capital Transit Net Up 29.6% In First Period

By S. Oliver Goodman

Reflecting new highs in traffic, net income of the Capital Transit Co. advanced 29.6 per cent in the first three months this year compared with the same 1942 period.

The quarterly report, filed yesterday with the Public Utilities Commission, showed net income of $411,330 in the first quarter against $317,439 last year.

Net income for March was $148,226, but the comparison with the same month last year was distorted because of an adjustment applying to preceding months. Net income in March, 1942, was reduced from approximately $124,000 to $71,103 by the retroactive tax adjustment.

Highlights of the March statement follow: Operating revenues $2,385,253 against $1,788,074 last year; operating expenses $1,511,693 against $1,160,430; taxes $474,887 against $355,431; depreciation $190,164 against $141,765; revenue passengers 35,546,567 against 25,817,221.

Highlights of the three months' statement: Operating revenues $6,986,963 against $4,982,974; operating expenses $4,328,145 against $3,333,271; taxes $1,494,242 against $731,139; depreciation $569,990 against $423,411; revenue passengers 102,551,925 against 71,587,549.

Business Briefs Of D. C. Interest

Retail Trade at 1942 High

Retail trade volume, receiving its impetus from final buying of Easter toggery and associated items, soared to a new high this week with sales estimated at 12 to 17 per cent above the like 1942 week, Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., reported yesterday.

Substitutions were made in some sales because of the lack of items in stock but they had little effect on volume. Purchasers still emphasized quality and utility values.

Apparel sales were in the spotlight with accessories dominating. Better millinery, shoes, blouses, neckwear, fine jewelry and handbags reached record levels.

Coats moved well as suit volume slackened and children's wear continued in heavy demand.

The pre-Easter decline in home furnishings and hardware generally was reported less than usual.

Regional percentage gains over 1942 were estimated: New England 4 to 9, East 8 to 13, Middle West 10 to 16, South 14 to 19, Southwest 19 to 26, Northwest 12 to 18 and Pacific Coast 15 to 21.

Week's Sales Gain 14% Here

Sales of Washington department stores in the week ended April 17 were 14 per cent heavier than in the corresponding 1942 week, according to the weekly report of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond.

For the four weeks ended April 17, retail sales here were unchanged as compared with the same period last year.

Sales in the Fifth Reserve District were 10 per cent increased for the week and 3 per cent improved for the four-week period.

Nationally the Federal Reserve Board reported that department store sales last week were 15 per cent higher than during the corresponding week a year ago.

In the preceding week such sales were 28 per cent greater than in the similar period in 1942, while in the four weeks ended April 17 they totaled 7 per cent more than in the corresponding period last year.

C. & O. Lists Promotions

Directors of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Co. announced appointment of John B. Parrish, Richmond, Va., as vice president following a board organization meeting.

Assistant vice president since 1926, Parrish started with the Chesapeake & Ohio as a clerk 42 years ago. He became general manager of the rail system in 1918 and assistant vice president eight years later.

Appointment of J. Fred Andrews as comptroller and Harry L. Yehmkuhle as assistant comptroller of the Chesapeake & Ohio, Pere Marquette and Nickel Plate Railroads also was announced by the board.

"MONTY" and HIS MEN

Greatest fighting force in the world today is General Sir Bernard Montgomery's Eighth Army. Tested, tried and not found wanting, this magnificent army is today marching on Tunis, driving the shattered remnants of Rommel's once proud forces into the sea. Inspiration and leader of this exquisite instrument of modern warfare is "Monty"—frail, vehement, formidable—a great soldier, the cleverest general this war has yet produced. A. C. Sedgwick, New York Times correspondent who covered the Eighth Army's victorious march from the Nile to the gates of Tunis, writes a dramatic, first-hand story of "Monty" and his men in action.

"They Don't Write . . ."

Columbus, Ga. (A.P.).—The Columbus Ledger published this letter from a quartet of sailors stationed at Bainbridge, Md., to a funeral home here:

" . . . I guess your business has been very good since we left. Everybody seems to be dead. They don't write . . . If you haven't buried them all, I would appreciate it very much if you could get someone to write us."

Off to Tojo's Burial

Frederick, Md.—George Merriman, who has been operating a barber shop in Brunswick and who closed his shop this week in anticipation of entering the service, posted a sign which read:

"Gone to Tokyo, to Tojo's funeral. Will be back in a year or so."

"Gee-Gee" Tries On Her New Easter Bonnet—and Finds It's O. K.

SHE'S CONVINCED—Grace "Gee-Gee" Gorry, one of the twin daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gorry of Arlington, Va., wasn't so certain she appreciated the first Easter bonnet of her four months of life (1), but a second look in the mirror (2) began to change her mind. The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Editor's Note: This column is turned over to Federal employes each Saturday for their views and comments.

HALF HOLIDAY

Let me suggest a plan for Government employes to earn a half-holiday once a month. Give employes who have a perfect attendance record for a month a half a day off. You couldn't be absent for any reason and you couldn't be tardy or go home early to get the half day. Look at all the work Uncle Sam would get done with all the employes straining to keep on the job to win the half-holiday.

E. A. W.

ANTI-FEMINIST?

War Manpower screams with anguish over the lack of trained personnel and the Civil Service Commission cries it can't recruit employes demanded by Federal agencies. Why? Because the Government prohibits women in jobs where the need for personnel is greatest. Women aren't even interviewed in a great number of instances. Males are demanded for the jobs and if they can't be had the jobs won't be filled.

The Civil Service Commission some time ago sent word to Federal agencies that "no longer may Negroes be discriminated against." But the discrimination continues against women. A check at the commission would show that personnel directors daily send orders specifying "men only." No other limitations are fixed. Anyone will do except a woman.

Women trained in professional fields where there is an acute shortage of trained men can't get professional jobs in the Federal service. Even if they have passed the Civil Service exams the personnel offices in Federal agencies insist on starting the professionally trained women in clerical and stenographic jobs. And once you get into a stenographic job in Government you'll stay there.

ODE TO QUESTIONNAIRES

It's high time that we make it known,
That business men don't stand alone
For we here also must prepare
A multitude of questionnaires.

First Mr. Tydings wants to see,
Just what we do, from A to G,
And also we must indicate
Expenses we've incurred to date.

Then Mr. Byrd makes inquiry,
Regarding our economy
And emphasizes his desire
To cut the rate of public hire.

And suddenly with overtime
To 48 from 39
The budget sends us 408
To estimate and calculate.

Since pay increased we're in the red,
Our funds depleted and sorely bled
For budget, 415 is made,
So the poor mortals can be paid.

But wait! Here comes the C. S. C.
To ask, how many vacancies?
Who did you transfer, what did you save?
In 416 that's what we crave.

I'm sure that I have missed a few,
My memory has gone askew,
But every day at 9:15,
I look for number 417.

Ah, questionnaire. I must admit,
The facts you wish, I here submit
But if my fate to thee doth cling,
Oh, Death, where is thy merciful sting.

SIDNEY B. COHEN.

WASHINGTON AT WAR

Washington, as the headquarters of the Allied war effort, seems to lack one very essential ingredient—any obvious indication that there is a world-wide war going on. To be sure, soldiers and sailors are seen around the city but many of the officers seem to be carrying brief cases or wearing a worried look as if they had just had a hard day at the office (or had been unable to match the spool of thread they had been asked to buy during their lunch hour).

It would be a boost to the morale of most of us if we could hear some martial music once in a while and could see some soldiers who carried rifles and who really looked warlike.

The ceremony of Retreat is an inspiring one even in normal times and it would make a lot of us stand up straighter and feel more serious if we were privileged to witness this ceremony once in a while in all its pomp and splendor.

A lot of us war workers would see it and those of us who didn't might possibly hear the music and realize what it meant. It would be a good, heady tonic for those who did.

Soldiers' Sister Buys Bonds as Debt Repayment

Loraine Shirley, 1360 Fairmont Street Northwest, a clerk in the Ordnance Section of the War Department, is investing more than 10 per cent of her salary in war bonds each payday because she feels it is the best way to repay her debt to her country.

SHIRLEY

"Because I am a girl, I am safe and secure in my homeland," Miss Shirley said. "I am not asked to sacrifice my arms or legs or my life," and adds, "My country gave me education and when college seemed impossible, there was a way provided by the Federal Government for me to train in school for the very line of work I am doing now. I'm from Cushing, Okla., and in the Middle West we learn to pay our debts. It is a code of honor. That is why, when I bought my first bond I felt like I could live with my conscience. I shall keep on buying war bonds to the limit of my ability."

Both of Loraine's brothers are in the United States Army, one a private in the Engineer Corps and the other an officer in the Medical Corps.

Easter Sunrise Service Planned At Bolling Field

Bolling Field's first Easter sunrise service under simulated field conditions will take place tomorrow, Chaplain Donald S. Bourne, Protestant post chaplain, announced yesterday. WAACS will attend, and the 30-piece band of the 101st Cavalry (mechanized) from Fort Meade, Md., will play.

All military personnel, including organization commanders and department heads of the field have been urged by Col. Lewis R. Parker, Bolling Field commanding officer, to attend at least one Easter service.

Protestant services will be conducted in the chapel at 10:45 a. m., and Catholic masses there and at the Bolling Field Hospital at the usual hours, it was stated.

Kaiser Hires 200 D. C. Men To Go West

Some 200 construction mechanics have been recruited in the Washington area since Monday to work at West Coast shipyards of Henry J. Kaiser under a Nation-wide plan co-sponsored by the War Manpower Commission, it was learned yesterday.

Although public announcement of the recruiting was withheld to avert a rush of unqualified or locally necessary workers, it was learned that four Kaiser representatives have been carefully checking workers at the local United States Employment Service for the project every day this week.

The men already recruited are expected to leave early next week, travel expenses being advanced and homes assured. One or two Kaiser representatives, it was said, will probably stay on until Wednesday to omplete recruiting.

The Nation-wide plan, first announced April 8, was worked out by WMC and Kaiser to provide the shipbuilder with about 10,000 workers a month for the next four months. Kaiser will use the 40,000 workers to expand production in his three Portland, Oreg., shipyards and to provide replacements for workers leaving for the armed services or for other reasons.

WMC Ready to Aid Others

WMC officials have pointed out that similar arrangements for getting all available labor possible will be made with any other employer facing a problem of similar proportions.

Most of the locally hired men, who applied to the USES in answer to newspaper advertisements merely asking for shipyard workers, are part of the estimated 1800 who became available after the local emergency building boom ended. The men were employed on such projects as the Government "temporary" buildings.

An indication of the careful screening done to avoid sending out labor needed locally was the disclosure that but 330 men were referred for consideration by Kaiser representatives out of 1000 applicants the first day of recruiting.

USES officials stressed that extreme care is practiced not to take such workers as bus drivers, laborers, semiskilled and skilled mechanics, because men in these categories are locally regarded as nonsurplus labor.

Likewise, it was pointed out, no men are taken who are already employed in war work.

Kaiser representatives, who are headed by C. L. Johnson, field employment director, indicated that results here have been far greater than expected. The group will next go to Virginia and West Virginia.

Trolleys Collide; 1 Hurt, 12 Shaken

About a dozen persons were shaken up, and one was treated at Providence Hospital, late yesterday when a streetcar plowed into the rear of another on C Street west of Louisiana Avenue Northwest.

Miss Effie Corkern, 38, of 206 E Street Northeast, was removed to Providence Hospital and treated for back injuries.

The impact shattered the front window of one car, operated by Howard B. Norford, 53, of 1000 G Street Northeast and crumpled the rear of the other, driven by William E. Hamel, 72, of 805 Maryland Avenue Northeast.

Several passengers were given first aid at the scene.

Easter Paraders Have Chance For Sunny Day Tomorrow

By Helene Champlain

Post Staff Writer

Washingtonians will give a last preliminary tilt to their new spring bonnets—or their G. I. caps—today with hope that Easter 1943 will conform with the fair-and-warmer average of other Easters in the Nation's Capital.

The necessarily secretive Weather Bureau can't tell prospective Easter paraders whether or not their new outfits will be dampened, but it can tell them that 71 per cent of the holidays since 1871 have been clear and warmer than 55 degrees, leaving only seven Easters in all with honest-to-goodness rain. Followers of statistics may be reassured that April 25 has an average temperature of 57 degrees, with a normal maximum of 66 degrees.

Majority of Easter shoppers had wisely completed their tours by last night or were scheduled for disappointments today. Special holiday merchandise — candy, cards, baskets, toys, dyes—had disappeared in quantity from downtown stores a few days ago, as tremendous sales increases were reported. "The Easter bunny is going to find hard pickings on Sunday," one store official said.

Flower Prices Soar

But gift-givers could still make a floral offering to the ladies of their choice, if not as generously as in past years. Prices of flowers have soared in line with the cost of living and manpower, and war-imposed scarcity has its part.

The traditional Easter lily, which the peacetime United States got from Japan and China and Bermuda, is 90 per cent less available than on other Easters, while the current late Easter—it comes on April 25 only once a century—is too late for blooming tulips and hyacinths. Wholesale dealers had already depleted their stocks, while retailers experienced rush business.

As for corsages, orchids, roses, carnations and such were available, but not as plentiful as dealers would have liked. Gardenias and violets were scarce.

If your favorite wears a uniform this Easter, you won't be able to pin the usual corsage on her, but you can give her a plant for her room. Women reservists would be pleased with most any offering, however, a survey indicated yesterday. Their wants ranged from books to cosmetics, wallets to identification bracelets—and homemade cookies, if the man is versatile.

Some Egg Rolling

The traditional Easter egg rolling and hunting contests are banned from the White House, Capitol and Soldiers' Home grounds for reasons of military security and not because of food conservation. (There were eggs in all stores, at a 57-cent celing price for the best.) Families, however, may go to the Washington Zoo, where such festivities will begin at 6 a. m. on Easter Monday. For safety, no vehicles (cars, horse-carriages or bicycles) will be allowed near the grounds, and the buildings will be closed.

Peanuts and candy eggs will replace the usual article at hunts sponsored by the D. C. Recreation Department, which will offer war stamps as prizes.

Scheduled activities:

Fairlawn Park, peanut hunt, 2 p. m.; Rosedale Playground, Seventeenth and Gale Streets Northeast, party, 11 a. m.; Sherwood Playground, Tenth and G Streets Northeast, party, 11 a. m.; Franklin Park, peanut hunt, 11 a. m.; Hoover Playground, Second and N Streets Southwest, field day, 2 p. m.; Coolidge Playground, Fifth and Tuckerman Streets Northwest, field day, all day; Palisades Playground, Dana Street and Sherrier Place Northwest, field day, 10 a. m.; Chevy Chase Playground, Forty-first and Livingston Streets Northwest, party, 2 p. m., and Montrose Park, Thirtieth and R Streets Northwest, and Langdon Park, Eighteenth and Franklin Streets Northeast, supervised activities all day.

On Tuesday, a field day will be held at the Virginia Avenue Playground, Ninth Street and Virginia Avenue Southeast, 2 p. m.

Meanwhile, Postoffice officials reported the largest volume of pre-Easter mail they could remember experiencing, but booms aren't unusual in Washington these days.

Victory Sidelights

Prospective Air Stewardesses To Be Interviewed Today

Two former stewardesses of the American Air Lines are here to interview prospective stewardesses during a one-day stand at the Mayflower Hotel today.

Ruth Anderson, assistant to the superviser of stewardess service, and Marcelle Rheaume, superviser of stewardess procurement, will hold forth at a booth from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m., when they will climax a tour of 15 cities. They expect to interview dozens of interested girls, but statistics show that only one girl out of every 40 who apply can qualify for the work.

Both have to agree that the applicant will conform to American Air Lines standards, which are quite exacting. If you haven't the following qualifications, don't bother applying: two years accredited college training plus two years of business experience, age range from 21 to 28, height not more than 5 feet 6 inches, 125 pounds maximum weight.

D. C. Nursery Sites

Robert L. Haycock, acting Superintendent of Schools, has submitted for Board of Education approval 10 sites for nursery schools and 10 for day nurseries, it was announced yesterday.

The proposed localities are: Nursery schools, Divisions 1-9, Corcoran School, Twenty-eighth and M Streets Northwest; Truesdell School, Ninth and Ingraham Streets Northwest; Hilton School, Sixth and B Streets Northeast; Langdon School, Twentieth and Franklin Streets Northeast, and a cottage at Bellevue or at one of the housing developments in the Southeast area. Division 10-13, Harrison School, Thirteenth and V Streets Northwest; John F. Cook School, First and P Streets Northwest; Syphax School, Half and N Streets Northwest; Smothers School, Forty-fourth Street and Washington Place Northeast, and Langston Terrace, Twenty-fourth Street and Benning Road Northeast.

Centers for school-age children: Division 1-9, Curtis-Hyde School, Thirty-second and O Streets Northwest; H. D. Cooke School, Seventeenth and Euclid Streets Northwest; Jefferson Junior High School, Eighth and H Streets Southwest; Wheatley School, Montello Avenue and Neal Streets Northeast, and Knox Hill Recreation Building, 3000 Knox Road Southeast; Division 10-13, Bundy School, 429 O Street Northwest; Francis Junior High School, Twenty-fourth and N Streets Northwest; Garnet-Patterson Junior High School, Tenth Street and Vermont Avenue Northwest; Anthony Bowen School, Delaware Avenue and M Street Southwest, and Smothers School, Forty-fourth Street and Washington Place Northeast.

The Federal Works Agency has approved a grant of $77,368 for this project, which will provide day care for 800 children of working mothers. No money has as yet been transferred to the District, however, and the entire project is still in the formative stages.

Boys' Garden Ceremony

The Boys' Garden Club, sponsored by the Civitan Club of Washington, will open today with a flag-raising ceremony at 10 a. m. at the gardens at New York Avenue and Bladensburg Road Northeast. J. Morton Franklin, supervisor of the District of Columbia Victory Gardens, will be the guest speaker.

Trucker Held New Poultry Squeeze Prey

Recent OPA readjustment of ceilings on poultry has taken the "squeeze" off the processors and placed it on the truckers, with the same result—there will be no chickens coming into Washington—Joseph B. Dansansky, representative of poultry dealers, said yesterday.

The Poultry Section of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association held a meeting to discuss the effects of the change in ceilings yesterday. Danzansky made his statement following the meeting.

The new regulations put a ceiling of 28½ cents a pound on the price that may be paid by a trucker, or anyone else buying for resale, for live birds on the farm.

The processor, to whom the chicken is sold, then is permitted to pay not over 29¾ cents a pound, allowing the trucker only 1¼ cents a pound for hauling the chickens into Washington. Most of the chickens have to be transported at least 150 miles. The actual shrinkage in the weight of a chicken hauled that distance amounts to fully 2 cents a pound, the dealers said.

Thus, the trucker allowed only 1¼ cents a pound for hauling the chickens, stands to take an actual loss of ¾ of a cent.

In consequence, the dealers reported they had been informed by truckers that no more would be hauled here.

Processors paying 29¾ cents a pound are allowed to charge the retailer 36¾ cents a pound, after the chicken has been dressed, giving them a cost-and-profit allowance of 7 cents. This is ample to take care of the cost and allow a profit, they said. Therefore, they are willing and anxious to continue operations but realize they will not be able to get any live fowl from truckers.

In view of the "hold-the-line" order of the President, it is against the OPA's anti-inflation policy to pass any more cost on down to the consumer.

Hence, the dealers said, the only possible solution is to force the farmer to accept less for his chickens in order to permit the trucker to make at least 1-cent a pound clear over his loss in shrinkage.

This would mean fixing a ceiling price of 27 cents as the top that a farmer could charge.

But, farm ceiling prices are opposed by the Department of Agriculture and OPA's hands are tied, Danzansky said. The price-fixing agency has done all that it can and it is now the victim of another squeeze play.

Danzansky said that a few months ago farmers were selling chickens at 23 cents a pound and making a profit. A year ago they were getting only 19 cents.

Even so there are large numbers who are selling to black market operators at more even than the OPA allows legitimate dealers to pay, dealers said.

FWA Engineer Is Found Dead

Charles W. Goodwin, 49, an engineer with the Federal Works Administration, was found unconscious in the gas filled kitchen of his apartment at the Kennedy-Warren, 3133 Connecticut Avenue Northwest, last night.

He was pronounced dead by a private physician. His wife, Mrs. Nene Goodwin, who found him, said her husband had been in ill health.

City News In Brief

Theft of $300 and a diamond ring worth $1000 by a sailor he befriended was reported to police yesterday by Roy Moran, of the Houston Hotel, Ninth and E Streets Northwest.

The victim said he met the sailor, a third-class petty officer, on Ninth Street and invited him to his room for a drink. Moran said he fell asleep and when he woke up his wallet and the ring were gone.

Cumisky Made Director

James Cumisky, formerly director of the Merrick Boys Club, has been appointed director of the Christ Child Settlement House, it was announced yesterday. Eva Byrd, a social worker with the Public Assistance Department of Florida, has been appointed to the girls' staff of the Settlement House.

D. C. Appropriation

The $54,789,434 District appropriation bill, which passed the House without a dissenting vote last Tuesday, was reported yesterday to the Senate Appropriations subcommittee. Hearings will start about May 5, committee members stated yesterday.

Dentists to See Film

The Robert T. Freeman Dental Society will meet at 9 p. m. tonight at the Twelfth Street Branch Y. M. C. A. Dr. Roscoe Brown of the United States Public Health Service will show a sound motion picture film, "About Faces."

Airlines to Be Honored

Pennsylvania Central Airlines will be honored by the National Aeronautic Association at a dinner in the Carlton Hotel April 26, at which time P. C. A. will have been in operation 16 years, it was announced yesterday. Nationally known aviation authorities are scheduled to speak.

Liquor Stores To Close at 9 On Weekdays

Curfew for liquor stores will sound an hour earlier on weekdays, the Commissioners ordered yesterday. For the war's duration the deadline for getting in that extra pint will be nine instead of 10 p. m.

Saturday night celebrations were spared, however, as the present midnight closing hour was retained. Greedy drinkers who lap up the last drop in the house will have to wait two hours longer the morning after for a pickup, since the opening hours have been changed from 8 to 10 a. m.

This shortening of hours was not due to any moralistic ideas of the Commissioners and the A. B. C. Board. It was done at the request of the liquor dealers themselves, who found that manpower shortage as well as the increasing scarcity of spirits made the old hours, in a great many cases, too long to be profitable. Two members of the A. B. C. Board thought the closing time should be optional—within the present limits—but Chairman Thomas E. Lodge and the Commissioners felt that uniformity was preferable.

Another petition from some liquor interests to ban deliveries of bottled goods in any sort of gasoline fueled conveyance was rejected, mainly because it was pointed out that if the drink can't come to the customer, the customer will come to the drink.

Capital Faces Slender Menus For Easter

Slender menus for Easter Sunday—the first feast day since the advent of rationing—faces the city, a check of meat produce and poultry dealers yeesterday revealed.

Conflicting accounts were obtained on the supply of smoked ham in the city, it being to Easter what turkey is to Thanksgiving.

One representative of a large packing company said he did not believe there would be half enough hams to meet the demand. A representative of another equally large concern reported he had sold more hams this Easter season than last showing that at least a percentage of District of Columbia residents will have the traditional dish.

Both, however, agreed there would be a real shortage of the preferred cuts of pork and beef, such as loin or shoulder of fresh ham and good beef roasts and steaks. There will be plenty of sausage and meat loaf, pork liver and such.

Dealers expressed the opinion that housewives had hoarded ration points in order to splurge on the Easter meal with a 10-pound, or so, ham. Such a ham would cost 70 points.

Of course there are many who are buying half a ham, at 8 points per pound.

Poultry, is just nonexistent in the city, dealers said. To blame are the high prices they have to pay the farmer for chickens while having to sell to retailers under an OPA ceiling which would force them to take a dead loss, they said.

There is an ample supply of fish.

On the produce side there are still no potatoes and sweet potatoes, which have been used as one of the substitutes, are growing acutely scarce. Also the supply of cabbage is both short and of poor quality. One dealer said he had received a car from South Carolina—the only one reported coming into the city—and that the heads would not weigh a pound each.

Lettuce and beets are scarce to the point where dealers fear there will be a famine.

Onions are plentiful. Spinach is beginning to move into the city from Arkansas. Beans are plentiful and there is a good supply of small-sized grapefruit.

Celery is quite scarce and this is attributed to the action of the Florida bean growers who are paying pickers top wages to keep them from going to the celery growers and harvesting that crop.

Other vegetables reported to be short of the anticipated demand are asparagus, cauliflower, and radishes.

No Potatoes

Officials of the State Office of Price Administration in Baltimore predicted yesterday that Maryland's potato shortage, caused mainly by Florida's frost losses, would continue for several weeks before ample supplies become available.

The Baltimore area was said to be the hardest hit section in the State.

OPA officials attributed the shortage also to increased demands for lend-lease shipments and black market activity, which enforcement officials said was under investigation throughout the State. Meantime, Niles S. Baldridge of the Food Distribution Administration said the potato famine in the State would continue until Free-State farmers, themselves, began supplying markets.

Your Baby And Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

I had said, resignedly, that I had uttered my last word about twins, as twins. Then along comes this nice letter upholding my viewpoint, of all things, and I couldn't resist it.

Mrs. G. C. proclaims that she wishes to come to my rescue. "You said that your article about twins aroused the 'wrath' of the mothers of twins because you felt they needn't be exactly twice as much work. I think you are 100 per cent right. I'm the mother of 13-month-old twins, weighing 25 pounds 8 ounces and 25 pounds 13 ounces.

"I have found that twins keep each other company. Therefore they do not need as much of the mother's attention. They are seldom spoiled for they grow up with a sense of patience. They learn someone must be cared for before themselves.

"Naturally they have been work, but I have kept them to a schedule since the day they were born though I fed them at the same time. When they were very small I fed them in their cribs with their bottles attached to a pliant arm hooked to the side of the crib. When they needed burping I lifted them out. Later when I gave solid foods I fed first one, then the other.

"Haven't you noticed, Mrs. Eldred, how often a mother complains that motherhood is a 24-hour job. How could twins be twice as much work, there aren't that many hours in the day.

"My hubsand has been a wonderful help to me and we are so proud of the job we've done. A cooperative husband is a jewel. He has always been glad to help and he used to change the babies at night while I got their bottles and he would undress them while I was busy getting supper. It isn't so hard to double a formula or wash more diapers or clothes when the suds are all ready. Personally, I am glad I had twins. I wouldn't have missed the experience."

To the last statement all mothers of twins would agree whole-heartedly. You'd better rush me information on that "pliant arm" you mentioned. I know just what will hpapen. Please, won't you?

A Mother: Thank you for your nice letter. I can see that you agree completely in everything this department is trying to do.

Mrs. M. S.: Arrowroot is a tropical American plant with a nutritive starch in its root. Animal crackers and crackers of similar consistency are made of arrowroot. They dissolve a little more readily than the average cracker and do not make choky crumbs in baby's mouth. Your grocer should have numerous types of these.

Button-Down-the-Front

By Jeanne Contini

The coat dress bids to be as great a favorite as the Chesterfield coat of last season—and with as many reasons. It is easy to slip on, spares your hairdo, is well fitted. Its lines are slimming. And, by virtue of the fact that it opens out flat when unbuttoned, is easier to launder and press than its sewn-up sisters. It is patriotic because its buttons eliminate any need of zippers. Always a good style, the coat dress is really important this year.

We think this coat dress is a true treasure. It is made of shantung, is cool, fresh and crisp. Shantung is a marvelous hot-weather fabric of which we'll be seeing a lot this summer. It never loses its crispness and has a definite resistance to soil. You'll notice that the dress we picture above has a soft flattering bow, but what you really can't evaluate until you get right up close, are the pretty fronds of tucking that graduate down from each shoulder.

Mint green, spice and sea coral are the colors. Price . . . about $13.00.

This dress could go to market, to work, or, if your husband gets a sudden yen to forget the office and calls you up for lunch, you can look very special in this dress with no more spectacular accessories than a pair of clean white cotton gloves and a pouf of powder on your nose.

Please call National 4200, extension 324, and we'll be glad to tell you where it can be found.

RATION POINTS

Shine, Shine, Shine—Grit, lodged in the crevices across the vamps of shoes, cuts the leather. Soft porous suede, particularly, provides a haven for dirt and clings tenaciously to the particles which alight. Many of us have already purchased the "one" pair available before June 15, the rest of us are wondering how long it will be before our last pair of Indian mocassins bite the dust. Coupons need not be used week by week but must be redeemed by the end of period. For example, red coupon, letter C, valid since April 11, need not be redeemed until April 30, its deadline.

CANNED FRUITS, canned vegetables, soups, fruits and vegetable juices, frozen foods, baby foods, catsup, dried beans (except soybeans) and other processed foods—Blue coupons lettered D, E and F, can be used through April 30. Coupon G, H and I are valid through May 31.

FUEL OIL—Coupon No. 5 is good for 10 gallons until September 30.

GASOLINE—Coupons No. 5A are good for 3 gallons each, but must last through July 22. B and C coupons, good for 3 gallons each, expire according to the date indicated in the individual books.

SHOES—Coupon No. 17 in Book No. 1 is redeemable for one pair until June 15. Footwear not covered by rationing includes certain types of play shoes, hard-soled house slippers, soft-soled moccasins, infants' shoes (size 4 or smaller), shoes with fabric uppers and rubber soles, ski and skate shoes, locker sandals, bathing slippers, overshoes, waterproof or snow and water repellent footwear.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

This is the season you like to live in a suit. Even with styles normal, nothing hits the waistline harder than a waist and skirt and now that they're conserving that half yard of material . . . well, it can't all come off the hem!

One of the most snugly fitting fashion favorites is made with a short jacket—a "weskit," it's called. Not one of them appears to have been designed with a plump waist in mind. Not only that, but a girl has to be flat as a flapjack.

But the styles are so snappy they should make exercise a pleasure. Besides, the midriff measurements are the easiest to fix. They improve with the least exercise and in the shortest time. What's more, you will be amazed at how much better you feel for this kind of exercise.

Here is a springtime program that is easy to take:

Begin with stretches and sidebends. Stand erect, yank your hips down and under, and haul up with the lower abdominal muscles. Get as much stretch as you can between hips nad ribs without elevating your shoulders.

Now, clasp your hands high overhead and, very slowly, bend directly sideward. Come back to position, relax, and repeat to the other side. One of these days you will be able to stand in that position, with feet wider apart, palms of hands turned outward, and bend down to the side until your hands are flat on the floor at the far side of one foot, stretch up, and repeat to the other side. When you can do that, you will be really supple and probably as slim as you could wish. Until you limber up, just do the first part of the exercise. Start with 10 counts and increase to 20.

Now, to put that abdominal girdle in condition to hold a flat front line:

Lie on your back on floor, knees flexed and soles of feet on floor. Simply contract the abdominal muscles and push the small of the back flat against the floor, hold, relax and repeat rhythmically for 10 counts. Rest for a minute, then from the same position, with abdominal muscles contracted and upper part of back on floor, twist at the waist and roll the hips over to one side until thighs and flexed knee rest on floor. (Keep legs together.) Come back to position and roll to other side. That doubles for waist and stomach muscles.

Another good exercise for the abdominal muscles is the old "wall bicycle." Lie on back on floor, hips close to wall, one knee flexed against chest, other leg straight up wall, lower back pressed flat against floor, and reverse the position of the legs. Repeat for five counts, relax, and do another five.

Move the hips farther away from the wall and "walk" up the wall until you are in a firm, straight line from toes to chest—be careful not to arc the small of the back! Hold for a second, then "walk" down. Relax and repeat three times.

There are just two bits of caution: Start your exercise easily. If you haven't been taking any exercise for these muscles, two or three minutes may be enough for the first few days. Gradually increase to 15 minutes. Also, you will have to use restraint in the amount of food you eat and the liquid you drink with meals. You cannot eat or drink to belt-pressing proportions and have a flat stomach.

It's About Time

IT'S ABOUT TIME to have your child or children set aside a certain time each week for thorough shoe cleaning. Teach them to do the job properly and not apply polish over dirt. Neutral colored polish will be easiest and safest for them to handle

News of the Women's Clubs

By Genevieve Reynolds

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

In an all-out effort to launch and coordinate its comprehensive summer program, the Washington Council of Church Women has set aside Thursday, May 6, as Council Day. At that time a meeting beginning at 10 a. m. will be held at Hamline Methodist Church, Sixteenth and Allison Streets Northwest.

Emphasizing its Victory Campaign goal, 33 1/3 per cent gain in membership and gifts, with Mrs. T. G. Carr, chairman, the council will have a special booth, where new members may sign up or old members report. Highlight of the program, however, will be a May Day luncheon at 1 p. m. when Dr. Warren D. Bowman, vice chairman of the Committee on Family Life for the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, speaks on "The Christian Family." Dr. Bowman also is pastor of the Washington City Church of the Brethren. Mrs. Gould Wickey will preside.

In addition to the business session of the morning, which will include devotionals, yearly reports and installation of new officers by Dr. Harry W. Burgman, an organ meditation period will be given by Nancy Poore Tufts from 10 to 10:30 a. m. Mrs. Joy Elmer Morgan, council president, will preside at the business session.

From 9 to 10:30 a. m., a sort of memory-jolt program will be in full swing. Purpose is to remind members of the council's various charitbale and civic activities, which include alley boxes, camp, hospital, soldiers' room and doll adoptions.

For example, the council strives to brighten up Washington's alleys with plants and window boxes. Whenever possible, each church in the council is asked to sponsor an alley for flower boxes. Not only cash contributions are welcomed but soil and boxes. Mrs. James Coffey is chairman of this project and will be on hand to receive all donations.

Working in conjunction with the District of Columbia Juvenile Court, the council sends many needy children to summer camps. Heading the camp committee is Mrs. Dwight V. Jones.

In order to teach underprivileged children good nutrition, hygiene and health rules as well as moral precepts and family responsibility the council collects dolls, dresses and puts them out for adoption. Heretofore, a tea has been held at the home of Miss Etta Mai Russell, executive secretary of the council, but this year, due to rationing, transportation and other wartime exigencies, the doll tea will be dispensed with. Nevertheless, the program will be carried on as usual. Mrs. William Glenn Young is chairman of this project.

As for the hospital work, Mrs. Thomas W. Marshall, chairman, requests that members bring with them on council day a book for Gallinger Hospital—one which you have enjoyed reading; a happy hour box that a sick adult or child would enjoy; a bedside bag, articles for a layette.

Monday a Busy Day

Monday's calendar is chock full of places to go and things to do. Bank Women's Club meets 6:30 p. m. at Avignone Freres on Columbia Road. Miss Mary Craven, newly elected president, will preside. Mrs. Elizabeth Rowzee is in charge of arrangements . . . The Wheel of Progress meets in headquarters at the Washington Hotel with the president-general, Mrs. Margaret Hopkins Worrell, presiding. Guest speakers are Maj. Amos A. Fries and Mrs. La Verne R. Philpott. General Fries discusses "Federal Aid in School Cirriculum" and Mrs. Philpott talks on "Our Latin American Neighbors."

Did You Know That . . .

Wives of 250 Army, Navy, Marine and Coast Guard officers met at the Sulgrave Club Thursday to hear Comdr. Albert C. Jacobs, U. S. N. R.; Mrs. Frederick Gore Richards and Rear Admiral Thomas M. Molloy, U. S. C. G., describe the benefits available to seamen and their families, through dependents' allowance, Navy Relief and Coast Guard Welfare. This meeting was the third in a series being sponsored by the American Red Cross to provide authentic information about various organizations which assist servicemen and their families.

Monday, Miss Bertha McCall, general director, National Travelers Aid Association, discusses USO Travelers Aid at 10 a. m. Following a recess, Earl N. Parker, assistant general director, Family Welfare Association of America, talks on Councils of Social Agencies and Family Welfare Services.

These courses are designed to give authentic information to servicemen's families.

Artist Will Shine In Postwar World

So Says Malvina Hoffman, Noted Woman Sculptor

MALVINA HOFFMAN

By Adelaide Kerr

America's most famous woman sculptor thinks the war and postwar world will give artists their greatest chance.

"There is a job for artists to do in changing people's circulation, waking them up and making them think," Malvina Hoffman told me recently in her New York studio. "People call us star gazers. We have to catch those stars and bring them down and make people look. Notice what some painters have already done with posters.

"There also is a job for artists in interpreting the people of one country to another—in making them understand each other. I noticed in the International Dance Exhibition in which 42 countries took part in New York in '38, that the dancers of one country would go without lunch to watch the rehearsals of another country's dances because they were so interested. And when the exhibition was finished all the dancers left with a far better understanding of the people of the other countries which had participated. Painting, sculpture and music can do the same kind of interpretive work."

Miss Hoffman bent her smoothly coifed white head, fastened a button of her blue artist's smock and stared reflectively into the curling smoke of her cigarette.

"The problems of reconstruction and of building peace in a postwar world will also give women the greatest opportunity they ever had for participation in the world's work," she went on. "Women have—by natural instinct—a better capacity for understanding other people than men have. In a scrap they cannot resort to the same tactics men do or use weapons. For centuries they have been peacemakers and arbiters in the home.

"But they have one terrific lack—a conception of the global point of view. Generally speaking, women are well informed only about their own corner. My work has given me a chance to observe at first hand the women of Asia, Africa, Australia and Europe. I found they did not know anything about the women of the next country and were not greatly concerned.

"The airplane has brought faraway countries next door in point of time. It is necessary for the people of any country to understand the others. If women do not acquire a better understanding of the people of those countries and their places in the world as a whole, they may muff the greatest chance they have ever had to do a really big job in world affairs."

Miss Hoffman's comments on art's job in a postwar world are doubly significant in the light of the fact that she has lived with the arts all her life. She was born in New York in 1887, daughter of the piano virtuoso Richard Hoffman, and studied painting before she turned to sculpture. Since her years of study with Gutson Borglum and Auguste Rodin in Paris, she has turned out a great variety of work which is famous for its strength and the feeling it reflects and which has brought her world-wide recognition.

Mrs. Hare Elected Chairman Of District P.E.O. Round Table

Barber, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Theodore Schoonover, treasurer; Mrs. Melvin Wittergren, chaplain; Miss Doris Erwin, guard. The convention delegates will be Mrs. Stansfield and Mrs. Barber.

Chapter N has announced the following newly elected officers: Mrs. O. R. Kroutz, president; Mrs. L. H. Simpson, vice president; Mrs. R. M. Patrick, recording secretary; Mrs. F. G. Hagie, corresponding secretary; Mrs. J. H. Rieley, treasurer; Mrs. W. C. Holland, chaplain; Mrs. Corwin A. Fergus, guard; delegates, Mrs. Kreutz and Mrs. Patrick; alternates, Mrs. Simpson and Mrs. Rieley.

Chapter Q's newly elected officers and convention delegates are as follows: President, Mrs. R. E. Brewster; vice president, Mrs. W. M. King; recording secretary, Mrs. H. R. Gearhart; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Frank Zeran; treasurer, Mrs. H. A. Campbell; chaplain, Mrs. H. B. Maris; guard, Mrs. L. R. Philpott; delegates, Mrs. Campbell and Mrs. Brewster; alternates, Mrs. Maris and Mrs. Philpott.

Let the Hurricane Blow

BY MICHAEL TRENT

CHAPTER XVI

"I acted like a low-grade heel, Ruth."

"What puzzled me was your not marrying her, Steve."

"Well, I spent a couple months searching for you. That's the truth, Ruth. I wouldn't lie to you, not now."

"But that wasn't why you didn't marry her."

"No," he said. "There was a better reason. I was actually mad about Tonia, so mad that I would have forgiven her flirtations. But her interest in me didn't include marriage. I was just an interlude until better game came along. The family had cut off my allowance, to get me to stop being a playboy, and Tonia didn't like that. The Lowry money looked good to her, but not when it was restricted. So she married another man. She divorced him two years ago."

"And now, Steve?"

"And now she remembers that she once was interested in me. I can tell by the look in her eyes. I'm old enough now to understand Tonia Wayne, and I've an idea that Steve Lowry could be in again—if he wished."

Ruth's voice was oddly shaken, asking, "And does he wish?"

"Suppose I say that's up to you?"

"Then I'd say you feel that you have to make things up to me." She shook her head and smiled. "Don't be too nice tonight, Steve."

Steve dropped his cigarette and caught her hands. She didn't try to escape his arms, and when he kissed her everything and everybody else was blacked-out of her thoughts. Tonia didn't exist. And for a moment Jean was forgotten. Then, facing reality again, "Thus must be because I was so much in love with you then, Steve."

"There's no other reason?"

"No. And if I go on being like this with you, I shall feel too guilty to face Jean, and his love for me. Steve, I'm just another girl to you. Please let this be the last such scene for us."

His hands were gripping her arms. He looked at her for a long moment. "You win," he said. "I've got to give you a break." His voice became curt. "Come along. The party will be over before we get there."

They went on then without talking, and they found the clubhouse jammed. Tonia Wayne was with a crowd over at the refreshment stand. Dr. Cartier was standing with a group of officers; he came toward Ruth when he caught sight of her.

"You came, Ruth? I'm so glad." He saw now that she was with Steve and a quick shadow crossed his eyes. "You managed to bring her, Capt. Lowry? I am grateful to you."

"Chance worked in my favor, Doctor," Steve told him. "I was hunting the bombardier of my crew, and finally found him at the hospital. He had an accident. Your patient, Burke, attacked him."

Dr. Cartier started violently. "Attacked him, Captain?"

"That's right. Would you say that Burke is—not quite normal, Doctor? Mentally, I mean?"

"No. I would say the man is sane enough."

"Well, we shall see," Steve told him. He smiled at them both. "Enjoy yourself." And he moved away through the crowd.

"Ruth, is this true? Did Burke really attack a man?"

"It's true, Jean. But you mustn't let it upset you. Certainly you are not responsible for what such a man does."

"But I am. Oh, you do not know!"

They had spoken in whispers, so no one in the crowd could overhear, but Jean's words hit Ruth with terrific force. She wanted to ask what was wrong, but Jean murmured that he must leave. He left her at once, making for the doors, and when she started to follow—as alarm forced her to do—Tonia Wayne squired by two soldiers appeared before her. Tonia halted in surprise, blocking her way.

"Why Ruth Hammond!" Tonia exclaimed. "How nice seeing you here!" Her green-gray eyes glowed with mocking amusement. "How exciting for you to be here—and how convenient!" Every word was barbed.

Ruth was too concerned about Dr. Cartier to react normally to the blonde girl's barbed words. But she knew what Tonia meant. Tonia was insinuating that it was convenient for her, Ruth Hammond, to be at the same base as Steve Lowry. She could find a lot of meaning in their being together—as Tonia would consider it—and that explained the chill green lights of fury in her eyes. Tonia was jealous.

"It is exciting here, Tonia," Ruth mechanically replied.

"The tropics are so—romantic?"

"So I'm told. But won't you excuse me? There is someone I must see." There was an urgency in her. She had to go after Jean. "It's awfully nice to see you again," she added lamely.

"But can't we get together—and talk over old times?" Tonia's eyes might show her real feelings, but her smile was friendly; she was such a good actress that Ruth knew no one about them realized that they were—well, enemies. "It's been so long since we've seen one another," Tonia said.

"Perhaps tomorrow? we could have lunch together."

"That would be so nice. You can tell me all about your life here."

"Yes," Ruth replied, managing a smile. "We have so much to talk about." She was in a frenzy to get away, and now, fortunately, Steve Lowry came pushing through the crowd tothem.

No Easter Bonnet

By Ensign Mary C. Lyne
Coast Guard SPARS

Weep not for the woman in uniform at Eastertime. Be not deceived by the many cartoons depicting her incongruously hatted in frilly chapeaus, gazing wistfully into her boudoir mirror. Allay your fears that she will be a pathetic bystander at this year's Easter parade. She is more to be envied than pitied—and you can lay to that!

For the past two weeks my civilian friends have shown me undue consideration. Whenever the subject of Easter shopping was broached in my presence, they talked in hushed tones, with solicitous glances, as though I were a thing of sorrow and a martyr forever. They seemed to be laboring under the delusion that I spend my spare time with my nose pressed against department store windows, vainly longing to taste the forbidden fruits of fashion. They even spoke flatteringly of the many "sacrifices" women in uniform are making for their country. And from the surreptitious manner in which they eyed my hose and hat, I know they were thinking of clothes.

Sacrifices? Well, maybe. It all depends on how you look at things.

We have sacrificed the privilege of debating for weeks on the relative merits of a tailored suit with a frilly blouse to match our eyes versus a print dress and a spring coat to suit our budgets. Freed at last from the wheedling advertisements in fashion magazines and the exhortations of clerks, we have decided, with the greatest of ease and no hangovers of regret, on tailored navy blues. No clerk's, "But, dearie, you'd look grand in this chartreuse" can move us from our guns. Our days of wavering indecision are gone forever. And it will be satisfying in the days to come to gesture nonchalantly toward the most expensive hat in town and tell our friends, "Now that's the lid I would have bought had I not been in uniform."

And If it Rains—

We have relinquished the agony of trying to predict the weather days in advance and of awaking to a Sunday morn of rain and chill with both our hat and glamour bob allergic to moisture. Our glamour bobs have gone the way of prewar gasoline. As for our hats—they can withstand fair days or foul with the aid of that camouflaged umbrella—the havelock.

We have magnanimously stepped aside during the Easter shopping rush and let the fortunate civilians shove one another around to their heart's content. Last year we were right in there, slugging it out with the best of them; this year there is no need to slug and push. We have been ready for months. Let others scramble desperately at will; we're also served who only stand and wait. We have been conspicuously absent at the rush on veils at the hat counter and the stampede for accessories and hose.

We have denied ourselves a woman's privilege of changing her mind and exchanging everything at the last minute because the lady next door had exhibited a discouraging lack of initiative by purchasing an identical outfit. We are legion. We will be duplicated by the thousands. We are resigned to the fact. Though we meet a copy of ourselves on every street corner, we shall march on undismayed.

We will leave untasted the cup of criticism. We have but to glance around at any of our shipmates to see ourselves as others see us. Heaven forbid that we should mutter behind gloved hands that "Ensign Jones looks dreadful in that hat!" or "Why did Seaman Potts choose Navy blue?" We are all in the same boat. Our catty tendencies have been washed away by a common tide.

By the same token we need not fear the criticism of civilians. Suppose our figures weren't made for a suit? What if we would look better in a veil? It's no reflection on our taste at all. We simply pass the buck to Mainbocher.

Peace, at Last!

Last Easter-tide my friends took me in hand. They tried to make me buy a hat with posies on the crown. They looked askance upon my lowly heels. "A nose-length veil is what you need," they urged. They made me miserable with helpful hints. This year I can relax and be at peace. I'm safe from both their naggings and their pleas. Backed up by regulations manifold, we stand invulnerable to helpful friends.

Of course, we've had to give up a corsage. There's no place on a uniform for waving ferns or flowering sweetpeas. By law we're "officers and gentlemen" and ferns aren't apropos to either one. But I rejoice at this "sacrifice." I feel depressed with flowers on my chest. I love them on the stem or in a vase but not pinned upon my front. Then, too, we'll all be spared embarrassment. The absence of a corsage will be blamed upon the military aspect of our lives and not to insufficiency of beaux. There's no necessity this Easter Day to out-orchid our friends at our expense . . . if some neglectful male fails to come through.

We're never surfeited with luxuries. A pair of silk hose—or of nylon—is more to be desired than great wealth. Their silky smoothness, after days of lisle, makes dressing up for Easter an event. And if we snag them on the church's pew we're not reduced to sloughs of grim despair. We couldn't wear them often anyhow. We're reconciled to transiency in life since we were fashioned for more sturdy things. Silk hose may come and they may go; our lisles will last forever.

A dab of "Suivez-Moi" behind the ear has just the same effect on our morale as sables draped about civilian necks. And oh, the sweet economy of it all!

We've "sacrificed" a lot of wear and tear. This year we'll simply don our new white gloves, remove the stuffing from our white-topped hats and give one last, brisk shine to our black pumps.

And when the Easter Parade forms on the streets, we'll fall in with our heads and spirits high . . . secure in the knowledge that we're dressed according to the latest dictates of Fashion and that we're right in step with present times.

This will be a frill-less Easter. Glory be!

N. Y. Club for Women in Uniform to Be Opened

At 12 noon on Friday, April 30, with the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marines participating, New Yorkers and several hundred distinguished visitors will witness a colorful ceremony when the WAACS, WAVES, SPARS, Women's Marine Reserve, Army and Navy Nurses Corps and representatives of the women's divisions of other United Nations formally take possession of their new clubhouse, the historic Whitelaw Reid Mansion at 451 Madison Avenue, now to be known as the Women's Military Services Club.

Mrs. Norman deR. Whitehouse, chairman of the board of trustees of the Women's Military Services Club, Mrs. George B. St. George, chairman of the Opening Day Committee, and Grover A. Whalen, director of the Civilian Defense Volunteer Office of Greater New York and chairman of the Board of Coty, Inc., who are underwriting the project, jointly announced the opening date and plans for a stirring inauguration ceremony beginning with a parade of women of the armed services flanked by a male guard of honor and including addresses by Army, Navy, Federal, State and city officials from a reviewing stand filled with notables, including the women commandants of the various auxiliary forces.

Since the entire ceremony will take place in the open air in the courtyard of the clubhouse, Mr. Whalen said plans had been made to postpone the function in case of rain to the following day, May 1, at the same hour.

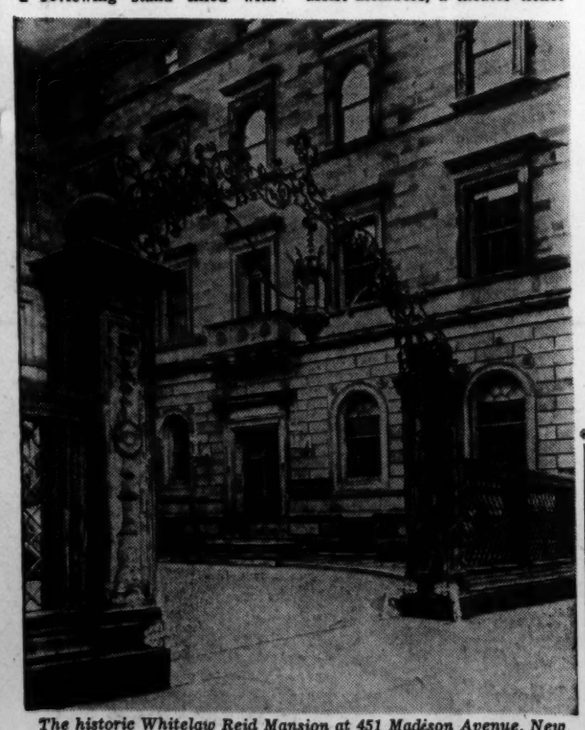
Each and every member of the women's auxiliaries to the Army, Navy and Marine Corps and similar corps of the United Nations will, on induction, automatically become a member of the Women's Military Services Club and will receive a courtesy card of membership, Mrs. Whitehouse said. She will at all times be entitled to all its facilities, which under military regulations provide separate quarters for officers and enlisted personnel. These facilities include overnight accommodations for about 50 enlisted women at a purely nominal charge, shower and locker rooms for all members, recreation and game rooms, lounges, writing rooms, a library and a canteen where three meals a day will be served at cost price, with Girl Scouts as volunteer waitresses. A complete information center where trained experts will assist members, a theater ticket bureau, and a guide service about New York will be maintained in the clubhouse.

A hospitality committee, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Percy C. Magnus, has been formed as a reservoir of volunteers to act as hostesses to make the girl members feel comfortably at home. Two other committees, a business and professional women's committee, with Elinore M. Herrick as chairman, and a junior committee with Mrs. Allan A. Ryan as chairman, will be responsible for a continual round of entertainments in the clubhouse, ranging from personal appearances of stage and screen stars to instructive talks and lectures, film previews and weekly dances with important "name" bands.

No "for women only" sign will be hung out at the Women's Military Services Club, Mrs. Whitehouse pointed out. Women members will be encouraged to receive their men friends in the lounges and, of course, at all parties. Though membership in the club is restricted to women in official armed forces uniforms only, guests of members may be civilians.

The fabulous mansion now transformed into the clubhouse has been a landmark in New York society for generations. It comprises the southern portion of the U-shaped brownstone building filling the block between Fifty and Fifty-first Streets on Madison Avenue originally known as the Villard Houses. Having been commissioned by Henry Villard in April 1882, Joseph Morrill Wells, a member of Stanford White's staff in the firm of McKim, Mead & White, designed the building under the inspiration of the celebrated Chancelleria Palace in Rome. When Whitelaw Reid bought this portion of the building in 1910 he commissioned the same firm of architects to remodel the house into its present form. At this time the celebrated carved and gilded music room with vaulted ceiling, the marquetry panelled library and the ballroom were redesigned and furnished to become the scene of many notable entertainments. Here the Prince of Wales, now Duke of Windsor, was given a ball on his visit to America in 1923, and during Mr. Reid's ambassadorship to the Court of St. James's, and later when his widow and family lived in the house, it remained one of the show places among New York residences.

Plans for the clubhouse have wrought no structural changes in the house, but have involved many additions and installations for the convenience and comfort of the members. Into the basement will go a number of shower and locker rooms, a beautifully decorated powder room, a first aid department, game rooms and a battery of telephone booths. The former music room will still contain its magificent carved and gilded panels and bas-relief decorations, including a musicians' gallery. This room will be used for entertainment of all types. The canteen where the WAACS, WAVES and other women in uniform will serve themselves cafeteria style, with the assistance of Girl Scout waitresses, will occupy the former dining room of the Reid house in which 100 people formerly were seated at state dinners. The huge drawing room stretching across the Madison Avenue side of the building on the first floor will be converted into a lounge for enlisted women.



The historic Whitelaw Reid Mansion at 451 Madison Avenue, New York, will be turned over next Friday to women in the uniforms of the United Nations, and will be known as the Women's Military Services Club

Easter Parade

(This column today presents its annual broadcast of the Easter parade—this time a preview.)

"And now, ladies and gentlemen, as the 1943 Easter procession gets under way, we see that it reflects that austere simplicity, restraint and good taste that American designers have brought to wartime fashions . . . Hobbling along near the front of the parade is Mrs. De-Coursey Tweet in a typically simple little man-tailored navy-blue suit with tight, fabric-conserving skirt that hits her slightly above the knees. Mrs. Tweet, originator of the slogan, "Win the war with femininity," has femininized her starkly simple outfit with a severely plain pink jabot with cascade of lace-edged frills, a modest ruby and rhinestone lapel rhinoceros, a large, simple purple orchid, plain lace-trimmed pink cuffs, an exquisitely subtle pink net ruched hat studded with blue velvet bows and swathed in veiling, a plain sequinned afternoon bag, and classic perforated open-toed, heelless sandals.

"Just behind her is Miss Edythe Mae Bulge, most widely photographed woman stevedore, who is wearing simply tailored gray slacks with matching coat, a natural mink scarf (in six-skin arrangement), a checked taffeta frilled sailor with a big bow of veiling, and somewhat dirty white playshoes.

Also here are two perennial favorites of the Easter parade—Mr. and Mrs. Broadhurst Chubby, also following the simple trend. Mrs. Chubby has chosen to be a Gibson girl, wearing atop her pompadour what is probably the widest sailor in the procession. The rest of her Gibson girl ensemble includes a simple gray flannel suit, whose skirt almost makes connection with her rolled hose (of 75 dernier rayon), a white peekaboo blouse, purple gloves and a protruding derriere. Mr. Chubby is wearing a mixmaster—beg pardon, mix and match—outfit of red and brown plaid coat and vest with simple pearl-gray trousers and an undersize hat.

"Coming behind them is Miss Roberta Whinny, strangely without her horse, Sir Neigh, whom she so greatly resembles. Miss Whinny is said to have the highest pompadour in this year's parade—7½ inches. Surmounting it is a simple high-crowned fedora with a waving quill. She wears a green and white polka dot ensemble and a tiny natural mink scarf (two-skin arrangement).

"And here is Mrs. Artemus Gadd, jr., in a beautifully simple blessed-event frock of red and white polka dots, over which is a fireman's red topper. And next we have Miss Daisy Mae Lisp, Capitol Hill sweetheart, in a streamlined little polka dot play suit, ankle socks, play shoes, checked topper and, in lieu of a hat, a single red rose swathed in veiling.

"Huntington Rhinestone, man-about-town, gourmet, genealogist, collection-plate passer, etc., is out as usual keeping score on the ratio of nylon and rayon hose in the procession. How goes the score, Mr. Rhinestone? . . . Ladies and gentlemen, Mr. Rhinestone reports there are 50 per cent less nylon hose in this year's parade than last, and that he notes an alarming increase in 100 dernier rayon and in cotton mesh hose.

"And now we have Mrs. Augustus Frowsy, who holds the proud title of worst-dressed woman, marching along in a simple little print ensemble (Latin guitarists and lovers on a Russian steppes background). Her slit skirt reflects the Chinese influence, her shoes are British walkers, and her hat a petal turban. With her is Mrs. Perceival Stepp, always up to the minute in style, whose blessed-event dress reflects the latest food trend, having small potatoes as buttons.

"And who is this just behind, walking alone? Why none other than Mrs. Sylvanus Stalactite, who has always held herself aloof from the common herd (wearing fumigated gloves when greeting guests at receptions) and who now has achieved privacy in this overcrowded city by wearing a large corsage of onions. Here comes a familiar figure, Miss Begonia Hack, eminent career woman in a simple but genteel mink dyed muskrat coat, a weatherbeaten beret—beg pardon? . . . Oh, Miss Hack explains that she is wearing her last winter's outfit because she was unable to get waited on in the stores and as the income tax collector and the restaurant men took all her money anyway.

"And here is a lady Nimrod advancing, a feminine hunter and trapper with her booty over her shoulders—oh, no, wait! This is Mrs. Parvenu Popinjay, noted social climber, in a beautifully simple natural mink scarf (in 12-skin arrangement).

"And here is Mrs. Badminton Bellwether in polka dots, flower calot and checked topper, accompanied by Mr. Bellwether, who has been dragged disgruntled from his bed and whose pajamas are showing beneath his striped morning trousers. And here are those inseparable chums, Mrs. Smith Toddy and Mrs. Brown Toddy, former wives of Ellsworth Toddy, both wearing polka dots and mink scarfs, and behind them is Mrs. Angora Goings in a blessed-event print frock, the design being a riot of sunflowers, roses, thistles and horseweed on a yellow background.

And here is Senator Prance in his Army son's discarded zoot suit, accompanied by his daughter—beg pardon? . . . Senator Prance says it is NOT his daughter . . . And Mrs. Thornberry Flitterjig in polka dots and her husband—beg pardon? . . . Mrs. Flitterjig says it is NOT her husband . . . and Marine Sergeant John Twiddle, accompanied by his aunt with a glamour bob—beg pardon? . . . The lady says she is NOT Sergeant Twiddle's aunt and . . . and this is Station GABB signing off."

"Wait a minute, wait a minute . . . how do I look WITHOUT a hat?"

Easter Parade

A suit and three mink skins don't make Easter, somehow. There's something about going to church that is as much a part of Easter as a spring hat. In fact, Easter started out as a purely religious matter, though a lot of us are apt to forget it!

Sunrise services are a little early for comfort, but are usually beautiful enough to be worth it. The spirit of the carols and the local color are likely to make us forget that we missed breakfast and that our roommate is home sleeping the day away. So let's get up early, for once in a year of Sundays, and see what the loveliest part of the morning looks like.

The annual Easter service at the amphitheater in Arlington Cemetery will be held tomorrow as usual—and this is always a thrill. The service begins at 7:30 a. m.—not quite sunrise, but early enough to be effective.

There's an interdenominational sunrise service also on the steps of the Jefferson Memorial at 7 o'clock. This one is sponsored by the Washington Federation of Christian Youth and will be directed especially at young things like you. If you haven't had a close look at the memorial since its completion, this is a good opportunity to combine pleasure with more pleasure; if you've already seen the memorial you'll get an additional glow at the sight of the lovely Easter flowers and the early morning glimmer of the Tidal Basin.

Several churches are conducting sunrise (or at least very early) services either inside the church or on the lawn. The Anacostia Methodist Church, at Fourteenth and U Streets Southeast, will have a service at 7 a. m. and all of the Protestant churches of the community will participate. The Bethesda Council of Churches is planning a similar community enterprise to be held at the Recreational Center, Norwood Drive.

Breakfast will follow many of the early services, just to provide an added friendly touch. For example, the Union Methodist, River Road Presbyterian, Universalist National Memorial and First Baptist Churches are all planning postservice breakfasts (services start at 6:45 or 7—better check if you don't want to be a bit early or late). Adresses of all churches are given in the Telephone Directory, classified section, Page 5.

If you can't quite make an early morning service, all of the churches naturally have splendid Easter services at their usual 11 a. m. or thereabout hour.

One of the most beautiful spots in Washington is the Franciscan Monastery, and the Easter services conducted by the fathers there are justly renowned. Solemn high mass is celebrated at 9 a. m. and there is an early mass and Holy Communion service at 6 in the Chapel of the Atonement. The colorful high mass service should be very inspiring to visitors of any denomination.

On Easter afternoon (3 o'clock) there will be a special service on the Pilgrim Steps of Washington Cathedral. Pvt. Paul Gallaway will play the cathedral's magnificent organ and the curator of the cathedral plans to tell a lot of fascinating facts about its past and future. This service is sponsored by the "Washington Welcomes You" group—especially for newcomers (obviously). If you want to go with the crowd to avoid getting lost, arrive at the Pennsylvania Avenue side of the Roger Smith Hotel at 2 p. m. and you'll get what is described in better circles as a "cordial welcome."

Just in honor of the occasion, most of the city's choirs have been practicing up on their favorite cantatas and oratorios. The Sanctuary Choir of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church will sing out the oratorio, "St. Paul," at 8 p. m. Sunday. Union Methodist, Asbury Methodist, Calvary Baptist, First Congregational and Luther Memorial churches will all hold special programs Easter evening at 8.

So, you see, there are plenty of opportunities to enjoy a fine Easter service at practically any hour of the day or night!

Don't Ration Your Manners

By Grace Martin

Has rationing brought out the worst in you? If so, you'd better ration your words.

At the grocery store, do you crab because you haven't enough points for a can of peaches? Don't pick on the grocer—he didn't set the ration price.

At the meat market, do you gripe because the butcher doesn't have a big thick steak for you?

Take it easy—he'd like to have peace and more meat to sell, too.

How about shoes? Maybe you were used to a dozen pairs a year. So were lots of other people! And they don't care to hear your guff that you just can't get along on three. Take your last year's dozen pair to the shoemaker and have them repaired.

Are you bragging to your friends about the clothes you've hoarded? Don't do it, lady. You'll be out of style when you start to wear them.

Office of War Utilities Quietly Goes About Tremendous War Job

Power Czar Is Director of Four Vital Utilities

By Martha Rhyne

In a town where life would indeed be dull if there wasn't at least one investigation of a Government agency a week, it is as much a pleasure as a surprise to find a comparatively unknown war agency doing an all-important war job. Not unknown in the sense of being obscure and unimportant is the Office of War Utilities but strange to banner headlines because of—of all things—its efficiency.

Under the entirely capable direction of J. A. "Cap" Krug, this organization has as its gigantic purpose assuring power, gas, water and communications to war industries and supplying these commodities in essential quantities to civilians. Without either of the utilities, war industry could not be and civilian morale would be in shreds.

Regarding the relatively small amount of publicity which exists concerning the OWU, Mr. Krug furnishes the reason by explaining the department's lack of a public relations department as well as the fact that things have gone smoothly for the power division. "Good news, unfortunately, isn't much news these days," the power czar explained. "And, besides that, news of importance to the public will be handled through the regular press. Why confuse the issue with endless statements, reports and denials which mean nothing anyway unless things go wrong?"

Pays Tribute to Efficient Staff

With the help of a hand-picked staff from the Nation's best engineers, Krug directs the planning of projects which will service the war industries and make arrangements for the securing of materials and properties necessary in war construction. To this staff he pays glowing tribute. In the first place, he operates with 500 employes, hardly a fraction of the number employed in other war agencies. Secondly, handicapped by working in the crop of temporary buildings which the Mall has sprouted and being scattered in three or four buildings, the staff has borne up bravely and has an indomitable spirit much admired by its "boss."

Although steel and rubber have suffered setbacks, no war industry has been seriously affected by the lack of power and communications. Operating with lower priorities, the success of OWU lies in the fact that these industries, private and public, were better established in pre-war days and have given their complete cooperation.

"Of course," Krug adds with a smile, "there has been the old public power versus private power feud which has been going on for a long time. But even that time-worn battle has been shoved into the background."

J. A. KRUG

The czar himself has been accused by public power of being in the "private" camp and by the "private" camp as being a "maniacal New Dealer trying to wreck the private utilities." It it a well-known fact that the Federal Power Commission and the Department of the Interior have been "gunning for his hide" ever since he made up his mind that the war must come first. But it so happens that the OWU has done its job—and strong defense turns away battle.

The term "czar" in application to him he does not like. "I haven't had to whiplash anybody into doing anything. There have been no serious power shortages and no lack of cooperation which was serious enough to demand force, an essential weapon of a czar."

Czar Is Native Of Wisconsin

About power, the former high school and college football player is enthusiastic. About himself, he is a bit reticent to talk at length. A native of Wisconsin, he attended the University of Wisconsin and was married during his college days when most boys are thinking only of semester hours, demerits, fraternity bids, and the latest dance rage.

In his education program, he specialized in public utility management and began work with a telephone company in Wisconsin. From there he went to the public service commission of that State, then to the Federal Communications Commission in New York, and to the Kentucky Public Service Commission.

Came to Capital To Work With OPM

With the advent of the New Deal, he became power operations manager for the TVA and it was from there that he came to Washington in 1941 to become chief power consultant with OPM. In those days, national defense was the Nation's slogan. When the phrase was replaced with "all-out war," Krug's power branch was transferred to War Production Board. Last July he became, as the victim of reorganization, deputy director general for priorities and since has become director of the Office of War Utilities. Another title and position to his credit is that of program vice chairman of War Production Board, just as responsible a place as it sounds.

Married, with two children, Mr. Krug declines to call Washington his home although the Krugs are here now. With a bit of homesickness showing through he speaks of his worthy-of-the-name home in Norris, Tex.

His physical heftiness bears out the fact that his shoulders are broad enough for a broad job. He speaks in a quiet voice that almost reveals his shyness. He works long hours and is a favorite of his staff. Somehow you can't help but connect him with the first President Roosevelt's "walk softly and carry a big stick" policy. Only he'll probably never need the big stick. Because he's a man who knows organization inside and out.

Dr. Ortiz Here From Cuba For Visit

A distinguished visitor to Washington from Cuba is Dr. Fernando Ortiz, a scholar, and intellectual, who is president of the Sociedad Economica de Amigos del Pais. Dr. Ortiz is accompanied by Senora de Ortiz and is here at the invitation of the Cultural Relations Division of the Department of State.

Dr. Ortiz has contributed greatly to the cultural and educational development and advancement in the field of letters and intellectual activities.

Dr. Raoul Herrera-Arango, Charge d'Affaires of Cuba to the Soviet Union, left for Cuba last night following a short stay in Washington. He was former Second Secretary of the Cuban Embassy and was recently appointed to the rank of Counselor. Dr. Herrera-Arango will join the Cuban Ambassador, Dr. Aurelio Concheso, to accompany him to Russia when he presents his credentials as Cuban Minister. Dr. Concheso will return to his post here and Dr. Herrera-Arango will remain in charge of the legation.

Before his departure from Washington, members of the Cuban Embassy staff and a few close friends gave a farewell luncheon in honor of Dr. Herrera-Arango.

Mexican Envoy In Mexico for Historic Meeting

The Mexican Ambassador, Dr. Francisco Castillo Najera, is in Mexico, where he went for the meeting of President Roosevelt and President Avila Camacho.

Salvador Duhart, First Secretary of the Mexican Embassy, will leave on Tuesday for Mexico. He will stop first in San Antonio, Tex., where he will meet a group of outstanding scientists of this country whom he will accompany by special train to Mexico City for the special conference of physicists at the invitation of the President of Mexico, Avila Camacho, and Governor Bautista of the State of Pueblo.

From Washington will be Dr. Lyman J. Briggs, director of the National Bureau of Standards, Dr. Watson Davis of Science Service, Dr. William Wulf of the National Weather Bureau.

Others attending the conference will be Dr. Harlow Shapley of the Harvard College Observatory, Dr. James G. Baker, outstanding optical scientist; Dr. I. I. Rabi, on loan from Columbia University to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology; Dr. Percy Bridgeman, of Harvard University; Dr. W. F. G. Swann of Franklin Institute at Swarthmore, Pa.; Dr. William Houston of the California Institute of Technology and Dr. and Mrs. Chantresekhar of India, who are now living in Wisconsin.

Mrs. Truman Baker Is Nurse's Aide

The first nurse's aide to be assigned to a settlement in the city is Mrs. Truman Baker, who works in the dental clinic which services children from the Christ Child Society and several other settlements and schools. Every Tuesday and Saturday she is present at the clinic. The hours on Tuesdays are from 1 to 5 o'clock and on Saturdays, from 8:30 to 12 o'clock. She assists Dr. Rober Hakill, the dentist in charge.

Other volunteers working in the settlement besides the board members, who include Miss Mary V. Merrick, Mrs. F. X. Callahan, Mrs. Arthur McConville, Miss Corredell Gower, Mrs. Charles W. Semmes, and Miss Mary Harlow, are a group of 15 women sent by the Volunteer Bureau of the Office of Civilian Defense. Miss Angela Craft, executive secretary of the society, stressed the importance of the aid of volunteers to the program.

Ensign Rowe To Be Wed On May 1

Th marriage of Ensign Jeanne Rowe, to Lieut. Carlton Skinner, U. S. C. G. R., will take place next Saturday in Dayton, Ohio.

Ensign Rowe is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Lewis Rowe of Lincoln, Nebr., and at present is stationed at the Navy Department here. The prospective bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Marian W. Skinner of Milford, Conn., and Prof. Macy M. Skinner of the University of Washington in Seattle. He is now on duty at the Coast Guard headquarters here.

The wedding will take place at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Harvison Catlin Holland in Dayton. Only members of the immediate families will attend.

Nation's Notional Capital Bewilders Hotel Guests

The 'Peripatetic Mrs. Smoot' Getting Dizzy From Whirl on Washington's 'Hotel-Go-Round'

By Elizabeth Henney

"I could be buying several war bonds with the amount it's costing me to move around this town," said the peripatetic Mrs. Alice Nibley Smoot, who has been caught up in the whirlwind of Washington hotel regulations and practically swept out onto a park bench.

With just a shade of bitterness in her tone, which is understandable considering her recent adventures in the Nation's Notional Capital, Mrs. Smoot said that Washington these days certainly isn't the same city it was when she made it her home for so many years.

Daughter-in-law of the late Senator Reed Smoot of Utah, Mrs. Smoot is here on Government business from her home in Beverly Hills, Los Angeles, Calif., where her son Charles Reed Smoot is with the Douglas Aircraft Co. Her other son, also with Douglas Aircraft, is now at one of their assembly plants in Eritrea.

'Can't Even Locate Myself'

"And," continued Mrs. Smoot, "Here I am with Government business to take care of, and because of the silly rules of the hotels, I've been bounced around to so many different places that I can hardly remember where I'm living myself, and practically none of the people I'm here to see can ever locate me."

Having arrived a little over two weeks ago, Mrs. Smoot stopped off at the Statler Hotel, only to be informed at the end of the first week that her time was up and that she'd have to move on—the five-day rule for hotel guests in Washington, politely explained the management, and even the President, said they, couldn't be accommodated past his allotted time. Mrs. Smoot, startled to say the least, said, "Well then I'd better cancel that cocktail party I was planning for next Tuesday, until I know where I'm going to be on that date." Thereupon the hotel arranged that she could stay until the following Wednesday, and since she wasn't able to locate a vacant room anywhere in town, finally extended her stay until Saturday.

No Room At the Inns

And that is just the beginning of the troubles. The Carlton said yes, they had a room and would take her reservation. At noon, says Mrs. Smoot, a bit skeptical, she called the manager of the Carlton, to be reassured that there was a space available. At 2 that afternoon she went over and registered, and at 6 she moved bag and baggage from the Statler, only to be told, so sorry, there was no room at the Carlton.

So back she went to the Statler Hotel and with bags stacked in the lobby began a frantic phone hunt of hotel rooms. At 11 o'clock that night she was still in the lobby. No luck. Finally the night manager came along, allowed as how they couldn't have people sleeping in the lobby and found a cubby hole for her.

As of this date, Mrs. Smoot is at the Lafayette Hotel, where she is already drawing to the end of her allotted time. And she still has a month's business in the Capital. In the meantime she has lost mail, contacts, phone messages, baggage, and says she, large pieces of her temper. "And by this time next week or even tomorrow, my address may be 'Park Bench, Potomac Park.' The whole thing's ridiculous and something ought to be done," says Mrs. Smoot.

Dorothy Spencer On Way Home To New Orleans

Giving up temporarily her search for a farm in this vicinity on which she might raise the flowers for which she is nationally famous, Miss Dorothy Spencer left Thursday for a visit with the Welling Spencers now at their plantation in Aiken, S. C. From there she will return to her home in New Orleans to stay until the end of May, when she will return here and continue her search.

Miss Spencer stayed at the Sulgrave Club while in Washington and lengthened her visit in the hope that something suitable might be found owing to the gas and tire shortage which has been the reason many suburbanites have moved into town. But her hope was unfounded, and, after looking far and wide, she still had no place for her lily fields.

Lieut., Mrs. Allee Now en Route to North Carolina

Lieut. and Mrs. John Gage Allee, Jr., who are now on their wedding trip, will make their home, temporarily at least, at Camp Davis, N. C., where Lieutenant Allee is a student at the Generals' Aide School.

The former Miss Harriet Dow, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Frank E. Dow of Northampton, Mass., and Lieut. Allee, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Allee of Montana and Washington, were married last week in the chapel at Smith College. The Rev. George S. Cooke, minister of the First Unitarian Church, officiated and Prof. Wilson T. Moog played the nuptial music.

Miss Eleanor Dow, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor. Miss Barbara Dow, also a sister of the bride, and Mrs. Joseph F. Hoffmann of Washington, sister of the bridegroom, and Louis Naylor, his cousin, were the attendants.

Frederick M. Kempton of Boston and Richard W. Dow, the bride's brother, of Springfield, Vt., were the ushers. Following the ceremony there was a reception at the Smith College Alumnae house.

The bride was graduated from Smith College in the class of 1939 and Lieutenant Allee, who was studying for his Ph. D. at Johns Hopkins University at the time of his enlistment in the Army, received his A. B. and M. A. degrees from George Washington University.

Art Exhibit to Be Held Another Week

The enthusiastic response by the public to the exhibit of "Figure Painting" by Jere Wickwire currently being held in the English room of the Raleigh Hotel has prompted the artist to extend his showing for another week. This will carry the exhibit through May 1.

Prominent and interested visitors to the timely exhibit, which features a painting of the Crucifixion, include Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, the Minister of Finland and Mme. Procope, the former Ambassador to Germany, Hugh R. Wilson, and Mrs. Wilson; Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Smith, Col. and Mrs. Richard P. Strong, Thornton Wilder, David Finley, Mr. and Mrs. C. Powell Minnegerode, Mrs. Richard P. Mallory, the Rev. John McGee, and many others.

Visitors Are Feted At Hotel Luncheon

Dr. Victor Fernandez Manero, chief of the National Department of Public Health of Mexico, and Dr. Raphael Fernandez, governor of the Brazilian Province of Natal, were guests of honor at a luncheon meeting held yesterday in the Chinese Room of the Mayflower by the International Medical Society.

Ranking guest was Senor Rafael de la Colina, Charge d'Affairs of Mexico.

Capital Girl Is Engaged To Maritime Officer

Bachrach

MISS NIDI WIERUM,

whose engagement to John Wallace Manning, son of Dr. and Mrs. William J. Manning of Cleveland, Ohio, is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Howard F. Wierum of this city. Miss Wierum was graduated from Georgetown Visitation Junior College. Her fiance attended John Carroll University in Cleveland and Georgetown University School of Foreign Service. He is a member of Delta Phi Epsilon fraternity. At the present time, he is at the United States Maritime Service Officers' School at New London, Conn. The wedding will take place in June or July.

Bolivian President to Have Busy Schedule During Visit

General Penaranda Due in Capital May 5 to Remain Until May 9

The Ambassador of Bolivia and Senora de Guachalla have issued invitations for a reception on Saturday, May 8, in honor of the President of Bolivia, Gen. Enrique Penaranda. The fete will take place from 5:30 until 7:30 o'clock at the Pan American Union.

The President will have a split second schedule from his arrival in Miami, Fla., on May 5 until his departure for a tour of war plants in Detroit on May 9. The official routine for visitors from south of the border will be varied only slightly for the Bolivian chief executive. Instead of flying from Miami to Washington, he will stop first in Richmond, Va., and come from there by motor.

According to present plans, President Penaranda will arrive in the Capital in the late afternoon and go direct to the White House where a dinner will be given in his honor that evening. After spending that night at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, he will move his luggage to Blair House the following morning, May 6. That morning he will speak in Spanish over an international radio hook-up and at noon will address the Congress. The Pan American Union will honor him with a luncheon after his appearance on the Hill.

The Secretary of State, Cordell Hull, will give a dinner in his honor that evening and in the afternoon he will hold a press conference at Blair House. On his itinerary for May 7 is a visit to Annapolis and the next day he will go to Mount Vernon. After the reception at the Pan American Union on May 8, he will be spotlighted at an informal dinner to be given by the Ambassador and Senora de Guachalla. The guests will include members of the embassy staff, their wives, and members of the Bolivian colony in Washington.

The Co-ordinator of Inter-American Affairs and Mrs. Nelson Rockefeller will be the President's hosts at a luncheon on May 9, after which he will leave for Detroit.

In New York

Mrs. Herbert Guggenheim and her grand-daughter, Miss Marjorie Mandle, are spending the weekend in New York. They are at the Savoy-Plaza.

Quiz Programs Are Fun for Paraguayans

Lieut. Col. Medardo Farias, Military Attache for Air of the Paraguay Embassy, and Senora de Farias are devotees of the quiz programs. In fact they keep one going between themselves.

Anxious to learn as much as possible about the United States, Colonel Farias and his lovely wife read voraciously about the history, geography and people of this country and Canada, then they try to catch each other on facts by shooting sudden questions

Senora de Farias was a dentist by profession before her marriage. They have two children.

Warren L. Pierson To Make Address

Mr. and Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson will leave today for Detroit, Mich., for a few days' stay.

The president of the Export-Import Bank will make an address in Detroit on Monday and he and Mrs. Pierson will return to the Capital on Wednesday. Yesterday Mrs. Pierson had a few friends in for luncheon at her apartment at the Shoreham.

Miss Ann Weaver Wed to H. E. Naylor, jr.

The marriage of Miss Ann Weaver, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Weaver of Front Royal, Va., and Maj. Hugh E. Naylor, jr., U. S. A., son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh E. Naylor, also of Front Royal, took place April 20 in the Chapel of St. Matthew's Cathedral in Washington.

Purely Personal

Mrs. Clifford D. Mallory left yesterday for New York for a short visit. She is at the Plaza.

Mrs. George W. Peeticord, the former Miss Eleanor Mills, has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alan Mills, in their home on Albemarle Street. She will return to her home in Pittsburgh today. Miss Julie Mills, another daughter, arrived from Sweet Briar College last evening to spend her Easter holidays with her parents. Other guests of the Mills are Mrs. Charles Van Horn of Philadelphia and Mrs. Robert Lewis of Wisteria Lodge, Madison.

* * * *

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Mitchell of Silver Spring, Md., left yesterday by plane for Miami Springs, Fla., where they will visit their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Mitchell, jr., for a week. Mr. Mitchell, jr., is a pilot for the Air Transport Command.

* * * *

Miss Myrna Helen Buschmeyer, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Fred S. Buschmeyer, will spend the weekend with her parents. Miss Buschmeyer, who transferred from Randolph Macon Woman's College last year where she was a member of Kappa Alpha Theta sorority, is now attending the Rennsalaer Polytechnic Institute in Troy, N. Y. She is studying aviation engineering.

Ladies and O'Gradys Team Up for Victory

War Erases Ancient Class Lines In All-Out British Effort

By Leo Branham

London.—War has brought about some remarkable changes in the social delineations of class-conscious England. Aristocrat or plebeian, no one over here now is too good to work. The blue-blooded gentry, just like the millions from the so-called lower classes, have joined in a united effort to batter Hitler's Germany into submission.

The eligible men of noble birth are in the armed forces or various government war services. Their ladies are doing their bit, too.

Very few of them went so far as to get jobs in munitions factories. But the high-born peeress and the girl from the East Side—London's "wrong side of the tracks"—are working side by side in the ATS (Auxiliary Territorial Service), the WAAFS (Women's Auxiliary Air Force), the WRNS (Women's Royal Navy Service), the MTC (Mechanized Transport Corps), the Red Cross or other service agencies.

Probably the most outstanding example of a titled woman forsaking the whirl of society—such as it is in wartime—is Lady Sarah

MARY CHURCHILL
Her ATS record is good

Churchill, 22, eldest daughter of the Duke of Marlborough and a cousin of Prime Minister Winston Churchill.

Known familiarly to her co-workers as Sally, Lady Churchill labored for a year in a munitions factory before taking a job as an inspector for a firm which manufactures instruments for the Admiralty.

Sally insisted on being just one of the hired hands. Popular with her fellow workers, she chatted intimately as one of them over her work bench or at lunch in the factory canteen. Starting as a common apprentice, she worked up through the shops to become an expert tool setter. She labored eight hours a day and took her turn on the night shifts. Once her hand became caught in some machinery, but the injury kept her from work only a few days.

Countess Wharncliffe, mother of five children, helped turn out shells in her father's munitions plant during the First World War. From her experience of 1914-18 she planned and equipped her own workshop when World War II broke out, turning an unused garage into another cog in her country's war effort.

A subcontractor, the countess now employs 10 part-time workers in her tiny factory, where, working side by side with the wife of a retired policeman, she is on duty 8 to 10 hours a day turning out nose caps for bombs.

The Marchioness of Queensberry, descendant of the old marquis who drew up the boxing rules, is one of these drivers. Others are Lady Jowitt, wife of Sir William, paymaster of all Britain's armed forces; Lady Diana Tiarks—she's a dispatch driver—Lady Diana Stuart Wortley, Countess Manton De Rable and Lady Waldgrave.

Lady Dill, wife of Field Marshal Sir John Dill, British military adviser in Washington, drove for the M. T. C. in France in the early stages of the war. She now is lecturing in the United States.

Mary Churchill, 22-year-old daughter of Winston Churchill, bears no title, but the A. T. S. is proud of her record in the service.

The A. T. S., a headquarters spokesman said, performs 60 varieties of work which range from manning searchlights, range-finders and precision chart desks for antiaircraft gun batteries to cooking and waiting on officers in army camps.

Several of the titled women, including two of American birth, work without pay from three to seven days a week for the American Red Cross in London. One is Countess Beatty, whose husband, commander of a destroyer, is the son of Britain's famous naval hero of the First World War. She formerly was Mrs. Dorothy Sands, daughter of T. T. F. Powers of Virginia.

Countess Beatty organized and headed the information bureau at the Washington Club for enlisted men. Doughboys on leave wanting to know about trains, buses or entertainment got the right dope from the countess. She went to North Africa with the Red Cross, where she continues to run an information desk.

Other volunteer American Red Cross workers are Lady Berkeley, Lady Chesham, Lady Strathallen, Lady George Cholmondeley, Lady Hope and Lady Sandhurst. They serve on hospitality committees, drive mobile canteens, run information bureaus and act as snack bar waitresses.

Lady Louise Mountbatten, wife of the British Commando chief, who works daily as a supervisor of nursing in St. Johns Ambulance Brigade.

Lady Reading, widow of the Viceroy of India, who heads the Women's Voluntary Service, an organization for older women who want war work.

Lady Inchcape, daughter of the white Rajah of Sarawak, who works in the prisoners of war packing department of the British Red Cross. She drove an ambulance earlier in the war.

Lady Burghley, wife of one of Britain's famous athletes and Olympic runner, who is an executive of the Prisoners of War Department.

MISS PAMELIA RUTH REED, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Randolph W. Reed, announce her engagement to Sergt. Vernon E. Graver, U. S. A., of Seattle, Wash. The wedding will take place early next month.

Easter Event To Be Held At Cathedral

Through the courtesy of the Bishop of Washington, the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, the Washington Cathedral, cooperating with the "Washington Welcomes You" programs, will present an out-of-doors program on the cathedral grounds on Easter Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Canon W. Curtis Draper, jr., will preside and there will be an informal talk on "Washington's Dream a Reality," given by John Bayless, curator of the cathedral. Organ music will be by Pvt. Paul Callaway, cathedral organist.

Hostesses, representing the American Women's Voluntary Services will include students of the Marjorie Webster Schools, Inc. They will be Miss Elsie Adams, Miss Betty Jayne Atherton, Miss Betty Brown, Miss Nell Hackney, Miss Jane Lawrence and Miss Dorothy Teath. Hostesses from the Office of Civilian Defense will be Miss Louise A. Green, Miss Elizabeth McGrory, Miss Ray Palkin and Mrs. Edward Stimson. Other hostesses will be Mrs. B. M. Crapo of the Women's City Club, Miss Alice Babb, Miss Hope Robertson and Miss Jane Sniffin of the defense committee of the Federation of Churches.

'Edge of Darkness,' Earle, Is Edge-of-Chair Drama!

A Superior Cast Makes Vivid Entertainment Of Absorbing Story of Occupied Norway; Mario and Floria Headline De Luxe Revue

"EDGE OF DARKNESS." Warner Brothers picturization of the novel by William Woods, adapted to the screen by Robert Rossen, costarring Errol Flynn and Ann Sheridan, with Walter Huston, Nancy Coleman, Tom Fadden, Judith Anderson, Helmut Dantine, Ruth Gordon, Charles Dingle, John Beal, Roman Bohnen, Helene Thimig, Monte Blue, Dorothy Tree, Richard Fraser, Morris Carnovsky, Art Smith, Henry Brandon, Tonio Selwart and Torben Meyer. Directed by Lewis Milestone. At the Earle Theater.

"EDGE OF DARKNESS," the Warner Brothers' dramatic thunderbolt that was unloosed on the screen at the Earle Theater yesterday, is the sort of picture that fairly blasts an audience out of its chairs.

Yesterday's first capacity crowd was pitched to such a high key of excitement that the final scene had not yet fully faded from the screen when the most tumultuous applause that has greeted a film play in recent memory broke out in a volume that matched the rattle and roar of the machine guns and grenades that had immediately preceded it.

It is no psychological drama that is revealed in this immensely stirring picturization of the William Woods novel. There is, of course, the sound basis of native revolt against the brutal tyranny of the invading Nazis, but its milder aspects have all preceded the opening of the film in the form of fish poisoned in the canneries, wires cut in the still of night and other premonitory acts of sabotage. Once the action is initiated, it is no war of nerves that is waged on the screen. It is a war of guns, blood and mass slaughter, with the German garrison and most of the population of the little Norwegian village wiped out, the handful of survivors marching away into the hills to complete the job they have so well begun.

While "Edge of Darkness" is primarily an action-drama, it develops as a corollary to all its more vigorous physical turmoil the gradual breaking down of the Nazi's faith in his self-made fable of the "master race." This vital, but secondary, thesis is carried to the point where the commander of the invaders finds escape from his own delusions by blowing his brains out when his invincible troops are annihilated by the unregimented civilians, charging through the woods with nothing but the spirit of free men to lead them on to victory.

The manner of the story's telling is as gruesome as it is effective. The scene opens with the arrival of a Nazi patrol to find the entire garrison and seemingly all but one of the native populace strewn about in death as they fell in that last savage clash. As the officer in charge of the patrol begins to dictate his report to headquarters, the action cuts back to what has gone before, leading to the battle climax with which the picture ends on the tragic note of its beginning. It is pretty strong meat, not too ideally attuned to the delicate sensibilities of small children and their emotional mamas, but inspirational to those who understand what needs to be done to release captive nations from the heels of Hitler and his hordes. There is a slender vein of romance threading the story, but it is more apt to get in the way of the major movement of events than aid it. What galvanizes interest is the courageous fortitude of a free people, unwilling to surrender their liberty of thought and action under any circumstances and determined not to on the subterranean promise of arms and ammunition with which to fight an unscrupulous enemy. There is too much incident in the picture to be recited in a brief review. It is enough that it is all heroic, grim and absorbing.

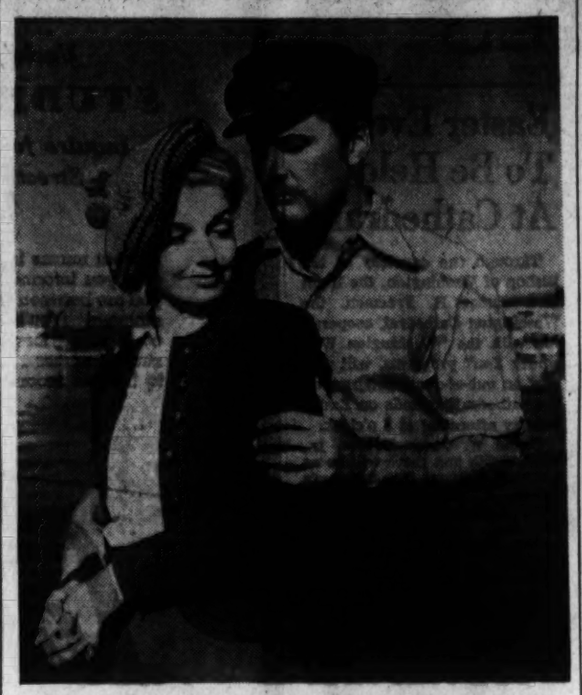
Supporting Players Overshadow Stars

Although Errol Flynn and Ann Sheridan are the ostensible stars of the film, as the youthful leaders of the underground revolt, and perform their allotted tasks efficiently, meatier roles are given multiplied effectiveness by other members of the cast. Highest acting honors, we should say, go to Helmut Dantine—Mrs. Miniver's captured Nazi aviator—as Capt. Hauptman Koenig, the garrison commander, whose "superman" myth exploded, both literally and figuratively, in his face. His performance is of genuinely stellar proportions. So are Walter Huston's, John Beal's and Roman Bohnen's, as the village doctor, wavering between complete patriotism and appeasement; his unwilling Quisling son, and an almost too zealous patriot, respectively. Charles Dingle is the picture's master-Quisling, whom the visiting patrol promptly murder as an insane impediment to the pursuit of their duties, and is more skillful in the character than he has been at any time since his memorable performance on both stage and screen in "The Little Foxes." Nancy Coleman, in an unessential part; Judith Anderson, Ruth Gordon, oddly suggestive of her admirable figure in Katharine Cornell's "The Three Sisters;" Morris Carnovsky, in one of his most eloquent portrayals; Monte Blue, Tom Fadden and many more are eminent among the supporting cast, so dynamically directed by Lewis Milestone.

The "Irving Berlin Album" stage revue is one of Managing Director Harry Anger's happiest creations—even if it does permit Gene Marvey to introduce a medley of favorite songs by George Gershwin. It is initiated by Jo Lombardi's orchestral arrangement of hits from "This Is the Army," progresses to the "Easter Bonnet Shop" interlude by the Roxyettes, brings on Barytone Marvey to sing his way into a smash hit, presents the incomparable dancing of Mario and Floria and finds time for two more exquisitely executed ensembles by the Roxyettes. All handsomely costumed and spectacularly staged.

To add a touch of sheer nonsense to the goings-on, the Merrie Melodie color cartoon introduces its carrot-munching star as "Super-Rabbit," to the high elation of everyone who has any sense of satirical and side-splitting fun. If there was a newsreel, we must have been looking away while it was on. A program of such magnitude and superlative excellence doesn't need one, anyhow.

Lend Romantic Touch to Grim Drama



ANN SHERIDAN AND ERROL FLYNN as Karen Stensgard and Gunnar Brogge, the young lovers and leaders of the rebellious Norwegian patriots who resent the Nazi yoke, in the Warner Brothers production of "Edge of Darkness," now on view as screen feature for the new week at the Earle Theater. Walter Huston, Ruth Gordon, Judith Anderson, Helmut Dantine and Nancy Coleman are among other stellar members of a superlative cast

World-Famous Skaters Form Background of Film at Met

By Marjorie Kelly

"ICE-CAPADES REVUE." Republic extravaganza, starring Ellen Drew and Richard Denning, with Jerry Colonna, Barbara Jo Allen, Harold Huber, Marilyn Nare, Bill Shirley, Pierre Watkin, Si Jenks, Sam Bernard, George Byron, and the "Ice-Capades" company with Vera Hruba, Megan Taylor, Lois Dworshak, Donna Atwood, "Red" McCarthy, Phil Taylor, Joe Jackson, jr., Jackson and Lyman, Robin Lee, Dench & Stewart, The Benoits, Eric Waite and Babs Sawyer.

If you're war weary, if you'd like to go to the theater for a couple of hours' respite, if you'd like to see a show which neither interprets the world conflict nor comments upon it, then the best bet in town for you is probably the "Ice-Capades Revue," which opened yesterday at the Metropolitan.

The company of internationally famous skating stars was seen here earlier this season at the Uline Arena. If you missed them then, or if you'd like to see these bevies of beauties in close-up as only the films can present them (that seat you had was awfully high up, wasn't it? And you always did wish you could have gotten a GOOD look at that blonde—the thing to do is get yourself down to the Met this week.

Slender Story Enough

The story is slight, but sufficient. It tells of the fight of an ice show against the cutthroat methods of a producer who squeezes out competition by means of his monopoly of skating rinks. Lovely Ellen Drew, as the owner and manager of the troupe, puts up a gallant fight, and Richard Denning is engaging throughout as the competitor's right-hand man, who fights first against Ellen, then with her. Before the happy conclusion, we have seen the world-famous skating stars in a variety of numbers ranging from a South Seas piece, in which the troupe of lovelies undulate seductively to Hawaiian music, to a fast-paced "romantic" number—"A Boy, A Girl and A Waltz"—which is sheer slapstick.

Jerry Colonna, as the angel who backs the show, is pursued delightedly throughout by daffy Vera Vague (Barbara Jo Allen), of the Bob Hope show. She is just as funny on the screen as on the air.

"Eagle Squadron," a short on the Navy Air Corps, follows, in Technicolor, the career of a cadet from the decision to enlist to his first raid, and a Henry Aldrich film in which Henry gets in the scrap—tons of it—complete the bill.

Rink to Screen

DONNA ATWOOD, among the skating stars providing animated background for Ellen Drew and Richard Denning in "Ice-Capades Revue," on the screen at the Metropolitan Theater

To Visit Murphy

When the stork pays his September visit to Hollywood, he will stop off at the home of screen star, George Murphy. Mrs. Murphy was the former Juliette Johnson, and Murphy's dancing partner when the two were featured in Broadway shows. They have one son, Dennis Michael Murphy, age 3. Murphy has just completed a starring role as an airman in "Bataan."

Broadway Glossary

New York, April 23.

BOOK: Now that the War Department has released the story of the Doolittle raid over Tokyo, it has consented to the release of the book, "Thirty Seconds Over Tokyo," about that raid by Capt. Ted Lawson. Random House will publish it. The movie rights have been sold to M.-G.-M. . . . The advertisements for the book will carry blurbs by four other Random House war reporters: Vincent Sheean, author of "Between the Thunder and the Sun;" Quentin Reynolds, who wrote "Dress Rehearsal;" Cecil Brown, author of "Suez to Singapore," and Richard Tregaskis, who wrote "Guadalcanal Diary." Each will say, "This is the second best book of the war."

HAROLD ICKES

REUNION: Captain Lawson lost his leg when his plane crashed after the Tokyo flight. His face was severely scarred. Doolittle arranged for a plastic surgeon to be flown to the hospital base, and the operation was completely successful . . . And while the hospital attendants helped restore Lawson's will to live, Doolittle arranged the final touch which revived the flier's spirits. He flew Mrs. Lawson to that hospital where, after their first embrace, she told her husband of the daughter born to them a few weeks earlier.

WAR: The receptionist at a beauty shoppe received a phone call from a man with a tough, gruff voice, who identified himself as a sergeant in the United States Marine Corps. "I'm phoning to make an appointment for Major Streeter," he stated. "The major would like a finger-wave and a manicure at 4:30." . . . "A finger-wave? And a manicure? For a major in the Marines?" gasped the receptionist. . . . "Yes," replied the sergeant. "For Maj. Ruth Chaney Streeter."

NAME: In the "Hearts & Flowers" chapter of Harold Ickes' "Autobiography of a Curmudgeon," the Secretary of the Interior tells of the trip he took aboard the Normandie, five years ago, to meet his bride in Ireland. But in his book Ickes makes no reference to the assumed name, "George Sucher," under which he traveled to keep his trip from becoming known. This is the story of that name: Harry Slattery, who was Ickes' Undersecretary then, had a friend named George Sucher. Slattery asked Sucher for the loan of his name. When, a week later, Ickes released the story of his wedding, he sent word to Sucher: "I now give you back your name. I've tried to return it to you as untarnished as it was when you loaned it to me."

MUSIC: The current story is of the man who applied for a job with a bandleader whose musicians were being drafted. "I'm a terrific musician," said the applicant. "And besides, I'm in 4-F, and draft-proof" . . . "What instrument do you play—sax, drums, trombone?" asked the bandleader, eagerly . . . "No, I play this," said the applicant, and showed him a comb . . . "That's not a musical instrument," yelled the bandleader. "You're nuts" . . . "Sure I'm nuts," said the applicant. "Why do you think I'm in 4-F."

CHATTER: Jimmy Durante may star in Vincent Youmans' new musical . . . Dudley Field Malone, who visited Mayor LaGuardia recently, left his eye-glasses at City Hall, and the mayor took them home . . . Billy Rose's new show at the Horseshoe will be called "Post-War Preview." . . . Hall McIntyre, who has been touring the country, describes a one-night stand as "a sleepless sleeper-jump" . . . Pietro di Donato, the author of "Christ in Concrete," has been stationed these past months at the Cooperstown camp for conscientious objectors. Now, at his request, he's being transferred to a new, tough post—working at the Byberry, Pa., asylum for the insane.

ENTERPRISE: The Broadway clothiers are telling of the clothes salesman who announced that, after many years, he was truly convinced that he must be the greatest salesman in the world. "I," he explained, "have just sold a double-breasted suit to a Phi Beta Kappa man."

HOUSING: When "We Will Never Die" was performed at Constitution Hall in Washington, 16 of Europe's most venerable rabbis went to Washington and appeared in the pageant. They were to have traveled from New York by sleeper, but at the last minute they surrendered their reserve berths to the United Stats Army; Billy Rose's manager, Jimmy Colligan, was called upon to find hotel reservations for them in New York that night. He phoned, desperately, to every hotel-manager he knew, and finally succeeded in obtaining a room at 16 hotels. Each rabbi went to each of the hotels, and each of the bearded patriarchs asked for the room reserved in the name of "Jimmy Colligan."

WORDS: Last week in Washington, Paul Hagen, the expert on the underground movement in Germany, held a press conference. "Perhaps the draconian labor laws are responsible for lowered morale in Germany," he suggested . . . "The what?" asked a puzzled reporter . . . "The draconian labor laws," Hagen repeated . . . "Oh," shrugged the reporter as he left, "He thinks he's another Mme. Chiang Kai-shek."

Whorf Gets Direction Chance

Hollywood.—Richard Whorf is the most excited actor on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot.

Originally signed to an acting-directing contract, Whorf has till now only been called upon to fulfill the acting half of the pact. Yesterday he was notified that he was drafted by Producer Bob Seitz to direct screen tests of Donald Curtis and Ann Ayars for the forthcoming production, "I Cannot Sail Your Seas," and he has been promised a directorial berth on short subjects to go into production soon.

Whorf's most recent screen appearance was with Spencer Tracy and Katharine Hepburn in "Keeper of the Flame."

'Horror' in a Very Large Dose!

Hollywood, Calif., April 23.—Laird Cregar will star in "The Lodger," a horror story which Barre Lyndon will ready for the screen. He'll play a sort of Jack the Ripper, which you know at the beginning. The mystery is how he's trapped. . . . Lillian Gish will take the place of Florence Eldridge in "Skin of Our Teeth," so Florence and her husband, Fredric March, can return here for a picture. . . . Mr. and Mrs. Cary Grant back in town and the first day here Cary had six stories thrown at him. He'll do one, then back to Army camps. . . . Victor Borge, Danish comedian who started his success story with Bing Crosby, comes out for "Broadway Melody," after which he will join the Army. . . . Leon Henderson, back from visiting the Floyd Odlums at Indio, stopped in to say there was no truth in the rumor he was tying up with movies. The only tie he wants to make is a job with pay for Leon. He'll stop off in Cleveland next Monday for "Information, Please."

LILLIAN GISH

No More Rambling

Ran into Paul Green. He's here with Eddie Burke doing the dramatization of Eddie Rickenbacker's life, which will take him from birth, through automobile racing, life in France during last war, battles in Washington, airline crash and South Pacific. I asked Green if he'd stay here to finish it. He said, "I'm tied down this time." He's a professor at University of North Carolina, and once when he came here to write a picture, asked if he might do it at home. They, thinking home was in Beverly, said, "Sure, if you're more comfortable there." When they wanted him for a story conference, discovered he actually had gone home—to Chapel Hill, N. C.! . . . Three members of Company C at Wright Field have Broadway hits—Pvt. William Saroyan, "The Human Comedy;" Sergt. Lynn Riggs, with "Oklahoma," and Pvt. Fred Schiller's "Something to Shout About." The boys are currently writing training films.

Mutual Admiration

Martha Raye, whose legs are mightly glamorous, did her skit in North Africa wearing shorts, by request of the soldiers. She loved listening to British Cockneys singing "Deep in the 'eart of Taxus." Her burlesque of "Mr. Paganini" (she called it "Mr. Mussolini") was a great favorite of theirs. Says she's working in pictures only to make money enough to pay her income tax so she can return to the soldiers . . . Binnie Barnes and Ben Blue are working up their routine they did for the King of England years ago. They will try it out at the Hollywood canteen before touring Army camps. Wonder why somebody doesn't grab it for the screen?

Welcome on Mat

Jane Vincent, here from New York, is being chaperoned by Charlie Feldman for a screen test. Her papa is a New England minister, the Rev. Wyllis Smith. She had several years of summer stock and a season with John Powers and became one of the highest priced models in America. They call here "a dream girl from any angle." She got a two-week run in "The Family" with Lucille Watson, then the play faded. She's a cross between Julie Haydon and Garbo, and with proper handling, should go far . . . Bert Wheeler, since returning from the Aleutians, is wearing Patty Orr on his arm again.

Fliers Credit Helmet for Part of Rescue

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, April 23.—A steel helmet gets credit for an assist in bringing the crew of an A-20 Havoc light bomber back safely from a bombing mission, in which a Washington airman nearly lost his life.

LAND

Capt. T. H. Broman of Duluth, Minn., was wearing a helmet over his leather flying headgear as the plane reached the target. Heavy flak shot away the left aileron and carried away the bombsight a split second before the bombardier-navigator, Second Lieut. George Land of 2025 I Street Northwest, Washington, D. C., was going to fire the bombs. He dropped them anyway—smack on the target.

Two Messerschmitts pounced on the damaged bomber, but Staff Sergts. Wilbert Welch of Pontiac, Ill., and Jack Botts of Porterville, Calif., kept blazing away with the top and bottom guns.

Machine-gun and cannon bullets tore away the engine and the rudder and Broman was forced to crash land while 6 miles inside enemy territory.

While the crew kicked and tugged at the transparent nose in an effort to free Land, who was trapped when the escape hatch jammed in the crash, Nazi fighters swept over six times, raking the crashed plane with shells and bullets.

Scottish soldiers picked up the crew and guided them to friendly territory. Broman found three dents in the helmet.

"I may look funny, but I am wearing my helmet on every flight," Broman said.

Sending Purple Heart Home to His Mother

Lieutenant Land is the son of Mrs. Louise G. Land, 2025 I Street Northwest. Mrs. Land said yesterday she had been notified by the War Department on April 16 that her son had been wounded in action on March 30. She said that the day after the War Department had wired her she received a letter from her son telling her he was sending home a package containing the Purple Heart Medal. The award is made for wounds and gallantry in action.

Before joining the Air Forces, Lieutenant Land was employed here by the Esso Travel Bureau. He is a graduate of Western High School and received his bachelor of science degree from The Citadel in 1939. He is a native of Norfolk, Va.

Dr. Gannon's Sex Statement Is Criticized

Doctors and ministers, whom Dr. James A. Gannon has told fellow members of the Board of Education should be responsible for the sex education of teen-age youngsters, are no better qualified than physical education teachers and lack the necessary time for such training.

That was the consensus of comments of leaders in education, medicine and the ministry, contacted by The Post yesterday.

In answer to Dr. Gannon's contention that the section on "human reproduction" should be deleted from the senior high schools' health curriculum, Mrs. P. C. Elett, president of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers, insisted that "the young boys and girls must get such information from the schools. They aren't getting it properly any place else, for parents themselves have not the necessary training, while doctors and ministers for the most part haven't enough time."

Disagreement with Dr. Gannon that the church may be the proper source for such education was expressed by the Rev. Dr. Warren Bowman, chairman of the committee on marriage and the home of the Washington Federation of Churches and vice chairman of the same committee for the Federal Council of Churches.

Dr. Bowman explained that statistics indicated the majority of children in Washington are identified with no particular church and have no inclination to seek out a minister specifically for sex guidance

"Proper instruction cannot be given briefly," he said, "and, particularly in this area where the physician shortage is acute, doctors cannot devote sufficient time to the matter. If a physical education teacher is well qualified to impart the knowledge in a scientific and wholesome manner, he certainly is the person to supplement students' information or correct their misinformation."

Dr. J. Lowery Fendrich, pastor of the Metropolitan Presbyterian Church, noted that, "the teaching of the processes of human reproduction is just as important a part of school curricula as the teaching of science or mathematics."

Also disagreeing with Dr. Gannon, Ray H. Everett, executive director of the District Social Hygiene Society, commented that "Doctors naturally are taught to think in terms of pathology. Too many young people have learned the proper facts after going to a doctor for treatment. The vast majority of parents in the District —and I've talked with thousands of mothers—are anxious to have the schools do much more than they have in the past."

Shoes Danced Out, Hostesses At Canteen Seek Extra Ration

By Adele Bernstein
Post Staff Writer

OPA chief, Prentiss M. Brown, will have a tough nut to crack next week when junior hostesses from the Stagedoor Canteen descend on him with a petition for an extra shoe allotment—"to help the war effort."

Armed with several pairs of heavily punished footgear, three of the prettiest hostesses yesterday demonstrated how hours of dancing with jitterbugging servicemen can deplete a girl's wardrobe. "And in no time, at all," too.

Of course, the girls explained earnestly, "we're delighted to do our part. The boys seem to enjoy it, and we give our time willingly. But we've got to have shoes to dance in!"

Display Holes in Shoes

The three "dancing princesses" stuck their fingers through gaping holes worn in their pumps by uniformed Prince Charmings. "We're going to show these to Mr. Brown," they agreed.

Two of the girls, Shirley Winston, 21, and Dolly Schuettler, 18, have served as junior hostesses at the Canteen since it opened seven months ago. Shirley, who lives at 419 Raymond Street, Chevy Chase, Md., is a dancer by profession. Carol Kitka, 21, of 702 Roeder Road, Silver Spring, Md., "hostessed" the Canteen since last November and does secretarial work at the Office of Defense Transportation in her spare time.

Jitterbugging is hardest on the sole, it seems, but Shirley, whose specialty is "conservative" dancing, pointed to her dispirted footwear. "I guess it's those G. I. shoes," she sighted, "when a soldier or sailor gets going with his feet, our shoes show it."

The girls tried to decide what section of the country produces the "hottest" jitterbugs, ending up tentatively with New York, Pennsylvania, California, Chicago and Florida. They did agree, though, that the "quiet ones" generally come from the Middle West, and that soldiers are more conservative than sailors.

On an average night, the Canteen's small dance floor is crowded with hundreds of servicemen—anywhere from 10 to 25 men to each of the 75 junior hostesses who serve each shift. When they are "stuck" with a boring dancer, one of the girls said, "we just say, 'excuse me, I must powder my nose.'"

Dressed in the crisp red, white and blue aprons worn by all Canteen workers, the three laughingly acknowledged that the whole thing was lots of fun, even though rules forbade "dating" and even taking some refreshment during the evening. "We just sit at the boys' tables and drool while they eat," Dolly said.

"And, of course, we never talk about military matters. That's forbidden. When a boy gets started on the subject, we just talk about something else," she added.

All hostesses have been checked by the FBI—registered, photographed and finger-printed. "No danger of spies among us," the girls said.

USO Clubs Plan Egg Hunts, Other Events for Servicemen

Washington's USO clubs will become Easter egg hunting grounds this weekend with a series of special entertainments for servicemen who must spend their holidays away from home.

Walt Disney cartoons of notables in the news will be painted on some of the eggs which servicemen and women will track down at the National Catholic Community Service center, 1814 N Street Northwest tomorrow, Easter Sunday, 4 p. m. Supper will follow presentation of awards, including war stamps, for the biggest pickings.

A special Easter songfest and egg gathering will be held in the penthouse of the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K Streets Northwest at 6:30 p. m. tomorrow. Supper also will be served.

Refreshments and dancing will follow the traditional egg hunt at the Y. M. C. A., 1736 G Street Northwest, tomorrow at 4 p. m. A similar celebration will be at the N. C. C. S. Club at 918 Tenth Street Northwest, 6 p. m.

Old-Fashioned Games

Old-fashioned Easter games, including an egg quest, will feature tonight's program at the Salvation Army USO Club, 606 E Street Northwest. Festivities will begin at 9 p. m. with a game, winner of which will be able to make a long-distance call to his home, wherever it may be. A vaudeville show is scheduled for 10 p. m.

Regular Saturday night dances will be held on Easter eve in clubs throughout the city, specially decorated for the holiday. For Negro servicemen, pre-Easter formals will be held at the Y. M. C. A., 1816 Twelfth Street Northwest, 9 p. m.; Leisure Lodge, 1439 U Street Northwest, 8 p. m., and Banneker Servicemen's Center, 2500 Georgia Avenue Northwest, 8 p. m.

Still another egg hunt, with a dance to Navy Band music, will be at Servicemen's Club No. 1, 306 Ninth Street Northwest, tonight at 8:30.

Opera Star to Sing

At the National Press Club Canteen, today at 2 p. m., Miss Josephine Antoine, Metropolitan Opera star, will entertain servicemen. The program also will feature appearances by Chief Justice Harlan Fiske Stone and Associate Justices of the United States Supreme Court, Attorney General Francis Biddle, Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai, Indian Agent General to the United States, and officers of the French Fighting Mission to the United States. The "Poison Ivy Trio"—three National Press Club members on banjoes and piano—and the Fort Washington Band will offer musical entertainment.

Fishing outings for servicemen will begin tomorrow, when a group will meet at Servicemen's Club No. 1, 306 Ninth Street Northwest, at 1:30 p. m. Food for the expedition will be provided by the club's junior hostesses and fishing equipment has been supplied by local sports organizations.

Tuberculosis Unit's Rumpus Flares in Open

Controversy over administration of the District Tuberculosis Association—which recently collected $80,000 by selling Christmas seals to the public—reached a direct clash of authority yesterday.

Dr. J. Winthrop Peabody, president of the association's board, attempted to oust Executive Secretary Harald H. Lund at once, instead of on May 13, when Lund's resignation is effective.

Lund challenged Dr. Peabody's authority and demanded to be shown a transcript of an order of the directors for his immediate removal. Meanwhile Lund—who has attacked Dr. Peabody's policies and accused the directors of neglecting the association—remained at his office and planned to give his annual report Tuesday night at the general meeting to elect directors.

Newcomb Acting Secretary

When informing Lund that he was through, Dr. Peabody said Charles Newcomb of the National Tuberculosis Association would take charge until a new executive secretary is appointed.

Meanwhile, Edward Persons, War Department official and son of a former head of the Public Health Service, W. Frank Persons, announced that the present association leadership would have opposition at the annual meeting.

Persons said a committee of the 7500 members entitled to vote was not satisfied with the lack of plans for spending the $80,000 collected to fight tuberculosis. This committee, he said, would support a group of candidates who favored an aggressive and independent community tuberculosis association.

One of Lund's charges was that the association was dominated by a small group of physicians who also were influential in the District Health Department and the District Medical Society.

Investigation Pledged

When the undercover dispute in the association broke out in the open this week, Representative D'Alesandro (Democrat) of Maryland pledged an investigation by the Public Health subcommittee of the House District Committee.

Lund and Persons welcomed this development, saying they thought a public and impartial investigation of the association would be an excellent thing. Lund wrote D'Alesandro offering to testify and supply any help he could in the investigation. Persons said he would appear willingly if his testimony was desired.

Dr. Peabody, too, said he would willingly cooperate with the House subcommittee or anybody else in any matter affecting public health questions.

Peabody Issues Statement

In a prepared statement last night, Dr. Peabody said:

"In effect, Mr. Lund, an employe hired by the association to execute its program, was attempting to control the organization and determine its policy."

Later on in the statement, which concerned itself almost wholly with the policies of the association, Dr. Peabody said:

"For the future, therefore, the D. C. Tuberculosis Association under a new executive secretary can develop a policy of mutual cooperation with other agencies involved in the control of tuberculosis. Thereby the association will render to the people of Washington a greater service, and the District of Columbia will be provided with a coordinated program for the control of tuberculosis which represents the combined efforts of all agencies charged with this problem, a program commensurate with the metropolis that Washington has become in recent years."

Arthur Thomas, Supreme Court Employe, Dies at 80

Arthur Thomas, 80-year-old messenger for the late Supreme Court Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, died yesterday at his home, 1436 Q Street Northwest.

Born on December 9, 1862, Mr. Thomas had been a Supreme Court employe since 1900. He served Justice Holmes for 20 years, from 1915 to 1935. On each anniversary of the jurists' death, he would place flowers on the grave.

Before his employment by the Supreme Court he was valet to Justice Field, and in that capacity worked at the present site of the Supreme Court Building, Justice Field's residence having been a part of the "Old Brick Capitol" occupied by Congress 1815-1819.

Shortly after Justice Field's death he was appointed as messenger to Justice Peckham, and served him until he died on October 24, 1909. From 1910 to 1914 he was assigned to Justice Lurton and for a brief period after that was messenger to Justice McReynolds. In recent years, he was doorkeeper at the Supreme Court.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow at the Metropolitan Church.

YOU'RE ALL RIGHT NOW--
GOLLY, HOW'D YOU GET HIM OUT ALONE?
WHY DIDN'T YOU WAIT FOR ME?
BECAUSE YOU'RE JUST NATURALLY SLOW, FAT STUFF! --YOU'D HAVE LET ME DROWN!
I SUPPOSE WOULD'VE-- IF I'D KNOWN IT WAS YOU!
ALL THAT TROUBLE JUST TO SAVE HI CALBUR-- SHUCKS!

SUPERMAN — Hear Superman 5:45 P.M. Today—WOL — By Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster

IN A FEW MOMENTS THE PASSENGERS WITHIN THE CABIN REVIVE....
PARDON ME, I MUST HAVE DOZED OFF.
I FELT RATHER SLEEPY MYSELF.
(NONE OF THE OTHERS REALIZES THERE WAS AN ATTEMPTED ROBBERY WHILE THEY SLEPT!)
THE VOYAGE CONTINUES ON ITS ROUTINE FLIGHT... ONLY CLARK REALIZES THAT ANYTHING OUT OF THE ORDINARY HAS OCCURRED... AND HE CHOOSES TO SIDE HIS TIME BEFORES ACTING. HOURS LATER, THE CLIPPER ALIGHTS AT ITS DESTINATION... THE BRITISH ISLES....
AND NO SOONER DO THE PASSENGERS LEAVE THE PLANE THAN LOIS LOSES TRACK OF CLARK IN THE IMPENETRABLE LONDON FOG....
SCREENED BY THE SHIELDING FOG, THE MEEK WAR CORRESPONDENT IS REPLACED BY DYNAMIC SUPERMAN

KID, YOU WERE A DEAR-- BUYING THIS POOR HORSE TO SAVE IT FROM THAT CRUEL BOY--
BUT IT DOESN'T MAKE ME LOOK LIKE A GOOD HORSE-TRADER!
A FEW GOOD MEALS AND HE'LL BE TOPS! LET'S GET THIS RAGGED OL' HARNESS OFF.
HE LOOKS SICK TO ME, TAM- OUCH! SOMETHING SHARP IN HIS COLLAR CUT MY ARM!
IT'S A HUNK OF GLASS, KID!

WASHINGTON

To My Fellow Americans:

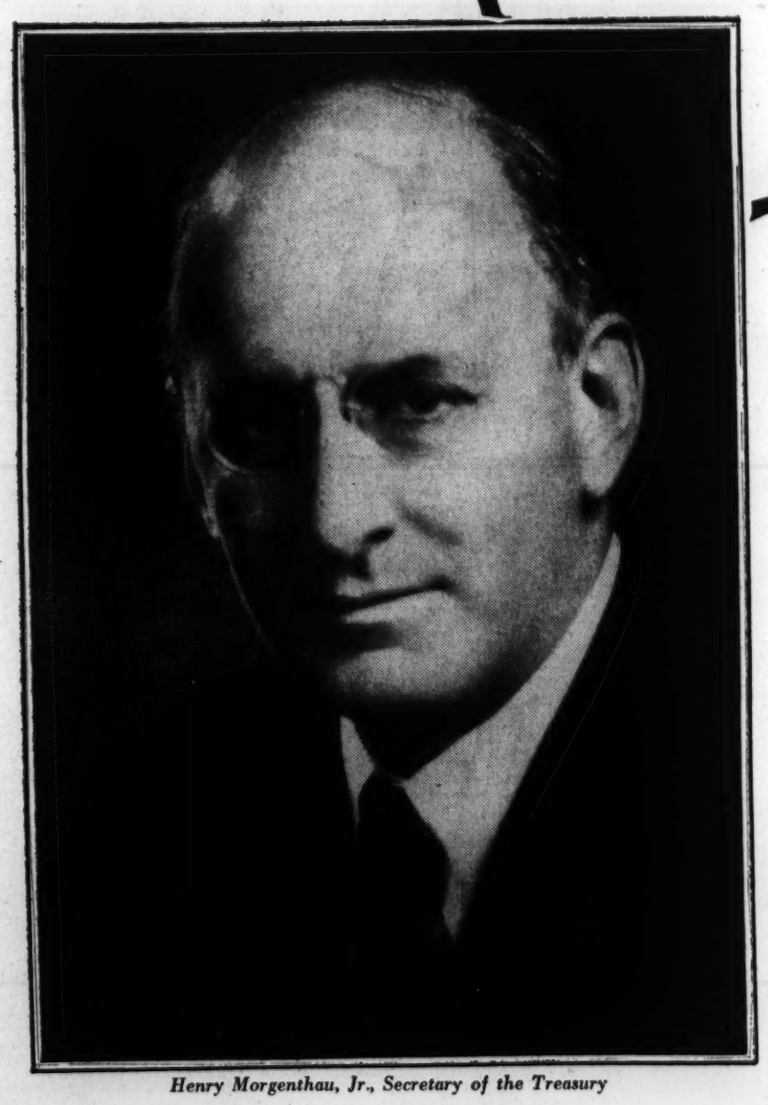
The soldiers, sailors and marines who fight to establish the Four Freedoms must draw from us the material and moral support to match their magnificent courage and ability. They have staked their lives on the calm knowledge that we will supply, abundantly and on time, the ships and weapons and equipment they must have to win.

Their trust is a sacred challenge to all of us, and we shall not fail. I know that every American will not only meet, but exceed, his duty. I know, too, that all of us will consider it a high privilege to help pay the bill by lending to America every possible dollar that can be spared.

For Freedom; for Victory; for America - let us all buy more and more War Bonds. Let us buy them freely and willingly until victory is won.

Sincerely yours,

Henry Morgenthau, Jr.



Henry Morgenthau, Jr., Secretary of the Treasury

The Secretary of the Treasury has written a compelling letter . . . a letter which ever American with good sense and good sentiment must answer, in his heart. His answer will not be sent with postage stamps. It will be sent with war stamps. The American with good sense knows that lending his dollars to his government now means doom to tyrants and their hirelings who have filled half the world with slavery and fear . . . He knows his money will mean that our Four Freedoms will survive here and be extended eventually to all men—"everywhere in the world." The American with good sentiment knows a son, a sweetheart or someone equally beloved will come home—safe and soon—if enough War Bonds are sold to supply him with the weapons that win a war.

The Hecht Co. expresses its appreciation in having been chosen to present the World Premiere of the Four Freedoms War Bond Show. It is an honor to sponsor in cooperation with the United States Treasury Department and the Saturday Evening Post an event worthy of the words of President Roosevelt and the artist who painted his "four essential freedoms"—Norman Rockwell. The War Bond Show will be in Washington Tuesday, April 27th, through Saturday, May 8th. We invite you to come any day, but particularly for the World Premiere Tuesday, April 27th, at which time you will have the privilege o' meeting the distinguished artist, Norman Rockwell, in person!

UNITED STATES TREASURY DEPARTMENT AND THE SATURDAY EVENING POST
